Note from the Editors: "Sophie and I had the task of going through every yearbook back to 1962 to find pictures for the cover. We wanted to provide the reader with some information on why we chose or liked each shot." - Angela Tucker (11)

1964 - We wanted to include the oldest picture of a Cavalier that we could find.

1966 - This shows a gym activity that we no longer do at the school.

1970 - Students in gym class used to prove their strength by climbing the wall with pegs on a board.

1973 - Can you believe that phones used to require this, and now they fit in our back pockets?

1983 - Who knew that we used to have an extremely successful, winning gymnastics team?

1988 - Almost every boy donned a mullet or at least tried. Mulletts have resurged again recently.

1993 - NWCTC gave students opportunities not found on campus. The welding program there has trained hundreds of Cavalier students over the years.

1996 - For decades, the swim team has executed snow runs and then jumped back in the warm pool.

2001 - Pride Club sponsored a car smash annually during Homecoming Week.

2007 - Long, hot days of band camp have paid off countless times for the marching band.

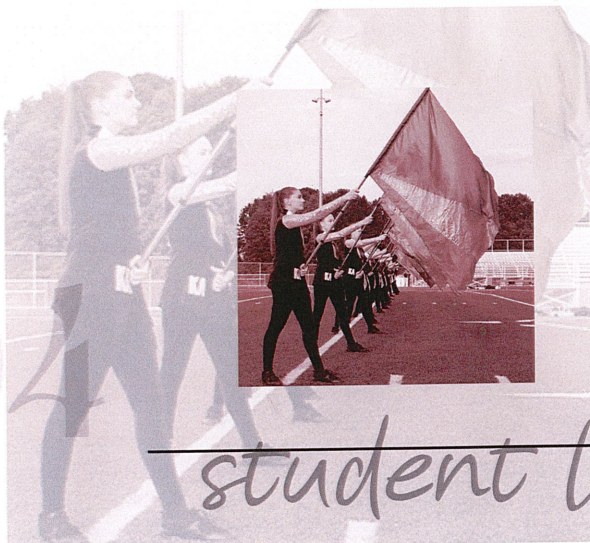

2012 - Carly Tansimore and her escort Anthony Palmiscno stood in utter shock when she won Homecoming Queen.

2013 - Taylor Muffie sacrificed her body over the fence to catch the ball.

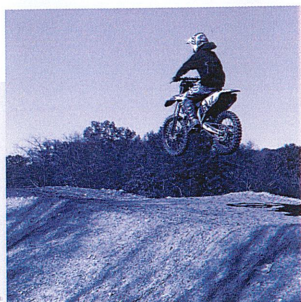

2020 - Emily MacLean clears the bar in a meet against Franklin Regional.

The band and guard had a historical accomplishment. Exactly what happened?

Guitar go-getter...

Focused on his notes, Lucas Vrudney (12) listens to the rest of the band in order to stay in time. "My favorite memory from this year was the first time we played in practice for a competition. It was the first time we fully added the guitar to the show, and it was really nice to see everyone's reaction," Vrudney said. Getting his start on the guitar at the age of seven, Vrudney planned to continue playing whether as a career or simply a hobby.

Where there's a Will...

In the twilight of her cheerleading career, Karissa Will (12) reflects on her time with the squad. Will said, "In my three years of cheer, the moment that stands out the most is both of the times my fellow seniors and I walked down the field/court for our last time, just looking out seeing my families and classmates in the stands." Will further said that bus rides to away games and interactions with the student section also held special places in her heart.

My father's daughter...

In a typical volleyball match, Abbie Johns (11) releases her pent-up emotion at the conclusion of a winning point. Johns said, "There's more dead time in volleyball to have reactions like this. However, I know I went nuts after we beat Fox Chapel in basketball because it was the first section win for us in four years." Johns credited her dad for her highly emotional and competitive nature.

On a fall day when Preston Fedoruk (11) has his guitar at school, he spends a good chunk of Lunch and Learn time playing his favorite tunes. Fedoruk said, "I have been working hard on getting good at playing Everlong by the Foo Fighters." Fedoruk enjoyed playing in front of people, especially in the library during L&L, because it allowed him to stay "hyper-focused on his strings."

Plans for the future...

The School Boards and the School Authority of the Kiski Area School System took justifiable pride in presenting the new Kiski Area Senior High School Building to their citizenry and in dedicating it to serve the educational needs of senior high school pupils. This structure represented cooperative efforts for the corporate good. It had resulted from many meetings and meeting of the minds on the part of many groups at the local and state level.

This plant stood on the optimum location to serve students of grades 10, 11, and 12 from the member districts of the jointure: Allegheny Township, Avonmore Borough, Bell Township, East Vandergrift Borough, Hyde Park Borough, Parks Township, and Vandergrift Borough. It consisted of seven buildings grouped about a central court.

A 60 year celebration

Story: G. Kraus (11)

Nestled in the rolling hills of northwestern Westmoreland County sat the Vandergrift Airport, soon reimagined into Kiski Area High School. On September 4th, 1962, the doors of Kiski Area opened for the first time. From seven separate buildings where students had to walk outside in rain or shine to seven scenic courtyards, from Davis Field to Richard J. Diltz Field, and from Vandergrift Airport to Kiski High School, what we leave behind had a huge impact on us and the generations to come.

Shannon Brown (12) left behind a legacy that will impact this school for the better.

"I founded SHOUT my junior year to help those who were being discriminated against and to work with the school to help minority students," Brown said.

Arguably the most prestigious music program in the state, the roots and focus on the arts started decades ago.

Choral teacher Mrs. McMeans said, "Finally, it seems that we're leaving behind this pandemic that turned our educational world upside-down. I'm so thankful that we can now have students return to the stage for concerts and Shrek, the spring musical."

Since its debut, 21,622 students have walked the stage to graduate and move on to their lives' destinies. On May 27, 2022, the next 275+ will take their turn and move forward. Still, not without remembering what they left behind.

Stairway to heaven...

For over 50 years, excited juniors and seniors dressed up and traveled to the hill above Freeport to Laube Hall for prom. The class of 1974 chose Stairway to Heaven as their theme, reflecting the 1971 Led Zeppelin release of the song.

A once all-night affair, after the photographer took the formal pictures, the shoes came off as quickly as the ties. Students enjoyed unlimited refills of fruit punch, a bountiful buffet of food, and the musical sounds of DJ Buddy Lee.

As dawn neared, the pace in the room slowed down a bit, eyelids drooped, and worn-out bodies lay everywhere throughout the hall.

At 6AM, the climb had ended, and hundreds of disheveled celebrants headed home.

Many smiles in a row...

Just prior to the Homecoming Game against West Allegheny, the varsity, JV, and middle school cheering squads traveled together in block formation down to Dilts Field for the festivities to begin. Olivia Croney (12) said, "When we cheer, the goal is always to get everyone hyped up and happy for each event. The parades are a really fun way to do that." The home team won the game 7-0 in a defensive battle against the Indians.

All the power in Bella's hands...

While Bella Uskuraitis (12) monitors the actors in Blithe Spirit, she focuses on whose microphone she needs to turn on and whose microphone she needs to turn off. "I have to control all of the sound, including music, sound effects, fading in and out, and the microphones. Whoever is on stage must have their mic on, but once they go offstage, I must turn their's off," Uskuraitis said. She worked with the musicals and fall plays starting in her freshman year and worked her way up to Stage Crew Chief.

Due to COVID restrictions placed on attending events, the music department held the first ever Kiski Area Cavaret instead of a traditional spring musical. Featured dancer Allison Zdobinski (11) said, "We had just finished a dance to a song from The Greatest Showman. Of the two dances that we performed, this one was definitely my favorite." The Cavaret showcased the talents of a dozen dancers throughout the show.

Just before the band performed their Beneath the Shifting Sands show at the BOA Regional at the University of Maryland, members of the clarinet section gather for a traditional circle photo. "Before every show, we always have circle time to get hyped up. We wish each other good luck, and it helps to calm all of our nerves," Ambur Orowitz (10) said. Competing against 32 different regiments from all over the nation, the band scored two and a half points higher than everyone else and won the event with a score of 82.500.

"I really like Cheer. It gives me something to do that is fun. I've made a lot of friends through it, and it has definitely expanded my social life."

Lauren Hilliard (9)

What aspect of your life completes you?

LOTS and lots of HOURS

Putting on a play takes a lot. From assembling the sets to memorizing lines to finding the right nuance for a part, hours and hours of preparation and practice help to produce a stellar show. However, the long hours could get cumbersome. Some members of the cast discuss the weeks leading up to the show.

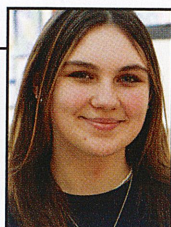

"I toughed it out for about two-and-a-half weeks leading up to the show. I was at school for nearly 16 hours each day with some Saturday work, too. One casualty I suffered was losing my voice."

Shannon Brown

"The fall play was a lot of hard work and hours. Our practices went from 6:00 to 10:00 each night and sometimes longer. During the lead-up to the play, I thought it was too much. Now that it is over, I miss it."

Ava Hutchinson

"It was exhausting, a lot of stress, and late nights. I was the stage manager and assistant manager for the director, so I had a lot to do. Everyone's hard work paid off in the end because it turned out to be a really good show."

Julia Szitas (9)

"It had lots of late nights, early mornings, and running scenes over and over and over. Even though it affected my school work more than I would have liked, the show was worth it and a lot of fun."

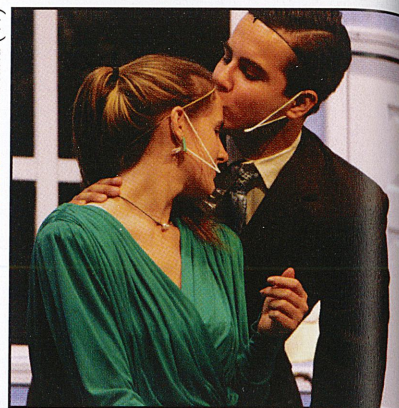

Landon Newell

Charles the patronizer...

As Charles Condomine (Bryant Brzozowski (12)) kisses his wife Ruth's (Madison Leith (12)) forehead, he tries to quell her displeasure with him. Brzozowski said, "In the first scene, my character Charles tries to be funny, but Ruth is having no part of it. She thinks I am annoying for making jokes about her dead former husband." Brzozowski knew he would love acting in Blithe Spirit due to entertaining his parents as a ten-year-old by talking with a British accent.

While receiving a scolding from Madame Arcati, played by Avery Toy (11), Edith, played by Jordan Hutchinson (12), displays her perplexity at Madame Arcati's accusations. Hutchinson said, "Madame Arcati was trying to figure out if Edith was the one who summoned Charles' ex-wife Elvira." Blithe Spirit represented Hutchinson's first foray into the fall drama after performing in musicals as a featured dancer in the past.

What went on behind the scenes?

"Towards the end of the show, there is a scene where the ghosts wreck the house. During the clean-up, I found this record which happened to be a casualty after it got tossed."
Dylan Arner (12)

"The crew has a running joke where when a person isn't looking, someone else will make a 'scary' face behind them like Dylan [Arner (12)] did and wait for them to notice. It's typically really obvious, but it was fun and a good bonding experience for the whole crew."
Gianna Kraus (11)

Got to do something...

After the seance, Madame Arcati (Avery Toy (11)) passes out. Garrett Fryar (12), who played Dr. Bradman said, "In this scene, I had to stay calm while Bryant's character Charles was freaking out. We wanted to wake her up and put her in a chair to recuperate, but Charles felt shaking her would help more. The doctor knows best." Blithe Spirit represented Fryar's first fall drama, but he had performed in musicals since seventh grade.

Bad, bad, Bradman...

Playing the role of Mrs. Violet Bradman, the doctor's wife, Lauren Michaels (12) demonstrably describes a recent bad vacation. Michaels said, "My character was very bad at realizing when she was being inappropriate, but she sees it when her husband gets very frustrated with her." Michaels felt Mrs. Bradman represented the exact opposite of herself.

"During the show, this table gets knocked over numerous times. I needed to staple the fabric to the table so that it would stay in place."
Annie Bowser (11)

"One of the things I had to monitor in the control booth was changing the 'gain'. I had to make sure unintended noises did not come from the microphones, such as popping and buzzing sounds."

Bella Uskuraitis (12)

"During the musical, I was really focused on making sure that all of the audio went perfectly so that the show ran smoothly."

ED, CONFUSED, and bruised

Cast and crew of Blithe Spirit discuss injuries on set

The cast and crew of the fall drama put in hours upon hours of work in order to make the best performance possible for the much-awaited opening night. From rehearsing lines, to painting the set, to... hitting your head off of a toilet? Unfortunately, some members of the cast and crew took the phrase "blood, sweat, and tears" to a whole new level.

Loraine Getty (11) had a rough day to say the least on the day of set strike. While taking down the set of Blithe Spirit, she ran from accident into accident. After hitting her head off of a platform, getting a phone dropped on her head, and hitting her head off of a toilet, she was down for the count. "I knew I was clumsy, but this was completely unexpected. I could've sworn I saw stars for a few minutes afterwards," Getty said.

Bryant Brzozowski (12) recalled the chaotic final scene of the play where his character had to give a monologue while the crew threw various objects on stage from books to potted plants. "Records and silverware were being thrown at me, and a butter knife landed straight up and down on the stage like an arrow. It was super cool." Brzozowski said.

Gina Hall and Dan Love portrayed leads in A Midsummer Night's Dream which represented Kiski's first ever Shakespeare production.

"The time helped us on stage crew to make sure things turned out well for the show. It helped us finish all the things we needed to do. It turned out to be a great performance."

Students share aspirations for future

Story: R. Frye (11)

"I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal,'" Martin Luther King Jr. said. Parallel to King, four high school students shared their dreams.

"I want to be a medic in the Army because after my uncle died, I wanted to help people, and I have always wanted to be in the Army," Brayden Gardone (9) said.

"I want to be a millionaire when I grow up. I want to be a successful entrepreneur. I have always wanted to commit to a college for basketball," Brian Davenport (10) said.

Dreams came in all different forms, whether long or short term, but everyone fantasized of something for their life in the future. As little kids we wanted to become astronauts, teachers, veterinarians, police officers, train conductors, and even a super stars.

"I dream of owning my own shop for fixing cars because that is what I grew up around. My dad has made a living off of it, and he is who I have looked up to my entire life," Ryan Schaffer (11) said.

"I have fantasized about being a professional dirt bike rider because it makes me happy," Anthony Ford (12) said.

Still, at the end of the day, everyone grew up and dreamt of different things for their lives: like carpentry, enlistment in the military, nursing, law, and more practically, what might pay the most.

DILTS DYNASTY

BUILT ON THE FIELD

To have a field named for you indicates a legendary status in one way or another. Richards Dilts represented the glory years of Kiski Area football in the 1960s and 1970s that included a WPIAL Championship in 1971. In 2018, the new stadium on the grounds of the high school campus took on the name Richard J. Dilts Field.

The notoriety of the feat did not get lost on Carter Dilts (12). Dilts said, "When I heard that they were going to name the football stadium for my grandfather, I was shocked. He did a lot of great things for Kiski Area, and it is an honor he definitely earned."

The Dilts name and playing sports went hand in hand as Carter included wrestling with his football playing time. His brothers, Jack (2021 grad) and Hunter (2019 grad), also played football and wrestled. His sister Jenna (2016 grad) played volleyball, while his other sister, Kaylie (2013 grad), played volleyball, as well as basketball.

Student discusses differences in school experiences

Previous generations liked to talk about the good old days. Current students could only imagine the good old days since they lived in the present day. But, everyone had the opportunity to speculate about the future. With the relatively high percentage of students whose parents grew up in the area, stories got passed back and forth between the generations.

Tavian Wilson's (10) dad Mr. Troy Wilson graduated as a Cavalier in 1990 and currently teaches physical education at the Intermediate School.

Wilson said, "My dad talked about how when he was a student here, you were in a specific academic curriculum. Based on your curriculum, that determined what classes you took. Now, with arena scheduling, we have more freedom as to the classes we sign up for."

Wilson's sister Avantai graduated in 2009. Regarding her time here, Tavian Wilson said, "She said how many of the popular kids in her class peaked in high school."

As for his own time here, Tavian Wilson said, "Social media has changed how students relate to each other. I've discussed with my dad how relationships of any type are just so different from his time here as a student."

SAME stage, same CREW

Unlike in years prior, stage crew did not build elaborate sets or move props during performances. Still, they remained a vital part of the musical. Members discuss the positives of stage crew.

"It was really cool seeing everything behind the cameras, and it was different than what we normally would do."
Olivia Croney (12)

"We really didn't have specific positions. I helped to make sure the stage was set for each performer."
Aiden Bico (12)

"It was a smaller group, but it brought us all closer together. It was nice because it was a bonding experience for everyone."
Gianna Kraus (11)

"It was a very interesting experience. It was nice to have something to do since the world was shut down."
Lorraine Getty (11)

"I'm just really glad there was still a performance and that I was able to be crew chief for it."

Dancers dig dance...

While the featured dancers perform "Come Alive" from The Greatest Showman, they hit their final pose. Allie Zdobinski (11) said, "Even though this dance was hard, having dancing experience helped make it easier." Many of the dancers commented that they found the dance fun and upbeat.

While performing a song from Guys and Dolls, Jackson Bielek (12), Landon Newell (12), and Mason Caldwell (10) study a book under the dim stage lights. Bielek said, "It was easier to perform for the CAVaret because we could do it multiple times if we messed up." Unlike the typical musicals with months of planning and rehearsals, the cast only had about a month to prepare.

"Even though we didn't have a musical, it was a great experience for me, being that it was my first show."

Sarah Johnson (10)

Going great for Godspell...

After a minimal amount of rehearsal time for CAVaret, Heidi Plazio (10), Garrett Seymour (10), and Rosa Heath (2021 grad) make the best of it while performing "Turn Back Oh Man" from the musical Godspell. Plazio said, "I loved working with Rosa and Garrett; we all loved how the song was playful and gave us freedom to show our musical abilities." Plazio believed that everyone worked hard and should take pride in how the CAVaret turned out.

CAVaret enabled musical-type performance without physical audience

The show must go on — even in the midst of a worldwide pandemic. After the originally planned production of Legally Blonde came crashing to a halt, many musically-inclined students wondered when music would return to the stage once more. Luckily, musical director Mr. Capanna had a solution... The Kiski Area CAVaret. In traditional cabaret style, this unique production showcased a variety of talent and music. The taped program live streamed on YouTube so that students, friends, family, and supporters could enjoy it from home. Not only did this special opportunity bring joy and entertainment to the school community, but it also provided a creative outlet for those students who nearly had their love of performance starved out by the pandemic. Some students even had the opportunity to perform a song from the cancelled show.

"This performance allowed me to share something new and showcase myself as an individual, which was a unique experience. I still felt connected to my castmates and I will cherish that memory with them," Shannon Brown (12) said. Brown starred in a musical number with other members of the Legally Blonde cast. "I am very thankful to have been able to take part in something meaningful, especially at a time when it did not seem like performance would be possible."

Intense situation...

After an overheated engine combined with a gas leak sparked a fire, Brady Lutes (12) attempts to limit the damage with his firehose. Lutes said, "I knew an explosion was possible, but when my fire chief told me to get back, I misheard him and thought he told me to push up. I heard a sizzle and two seconds later, the car exploded. I flew back about 12 feet and was hit by glass, a piece of the motor, and a piece of the transmission." Lutes' fire company responded to a call about a flipped car near Naser's not long after finishing up this call.

Student firefighter endures life-threatening situations

Story: R. Frye (11)

Heart pounding, people screaming, and fire crackling, Brady Lutes (12) rushed to the fire on March 4th at 8:17 p.m. with firehose in hand. The unbearable heat from a car engine caused a spark, and when combined with a gas leak, resulted in an explosion, sending Lutes flying about 12 feet.

Lutes said, "I was excited that I was finally dealing with my first fire wreck. I heard my fire chief yelling and thought he said to 'push up,' but he was yelling at me to 'get back.' I did not know that until it was too late. I thought that I was going to die on impact. Luckily, I only ended up with bruises and cuts after being hit with shards of glass, a piece of the motor, and a part of the transmission."

Lutes joined the Parks Township Fire Department at the age of 14, inspired by his father and stepfather, who also served.

"There are definitely hardships that come with the job; the hardest is having to extract the deceased bodies from the scene and not being able to save everyone," Lutes said.

Right after controlling the first fire, a second call came in—two cars participated in a race near Naser's, leading to a disaster. The feeling of excitement quickly went away after he had heard the news.

"I was devastated and angry that a baby lost its life in the car accident. The mother was holding the baby on her lap, and she survived while her baby did not," Lutes said.

The other car got stuck on the train tracks with a train scheduled to approach in due time. With no time to call the operators, Lutes and his team had to work efficiently.

"We did end up getting the cars off the tracks with time to spare; I am glad that no other damage was caused after the accident," Lutes said.

Addition of painted parking spaces lets seniors get creative

During the summer and with the new school year approaching rapidly, students rushed into the school's office to purchase parking passes to avoid the chaotic experience of riding a bus home. An added privilege greeted the incoming seniors... for an additional $25, they could reserve a parking space and paint it however they wanted.

Pailey Vitale (12) jumped at the chance to paint her parking spot, finishing it over the summer. She painted her spot to appear as a puzzle, with different aspects of her life on each piece. "The space also says 'you fit.' I wanted to use positivity in my design, and 'you fit' just represents everyone having a place in the world, and all of us coming together to build a puzzle," Vitale said.

"I chose to paint a portion of the final part of one of my favorite games. I wrote a message the game gives you once you reach the end - since it's my senior year," Katelyn Bombalski (12) said.

Many seniors appreciated the opportunity to paint a parking space. "It really felt like something I could make special about my senior year," Bombalski said.

High school provided a lot of new freedom to students, and they decided how to use it. Some consumed their time with studying while others participated in sports and other activities, but a rare few found ways outside of school to fill their time. One student in particular made use of her time by helping an organization important to her: The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society (LLS)

Allison Thompson (11) began her work for LLS because of the care services they provide for patients and families.

"The experience has allowed me to meet so many amazing people who are also involved in the foundation," Thompson said. "They have taught me lesson after lesson which has helped me grow as a student and an individual."

Thompson received a nomination for the LLS Student of the Year and has raised thousands of dollars for the foundation. "My favorite memory from LLS has

Color guard explains how uniforms affect performances

The crowd fell silent as the opening movement of the marching band's show, Beneath the Shifting Sands, began. Sidney Mowers (12) enjoyed this year's uniform more than any other.

"The only other time we had something like this year's uniform was in 2017 with Echoes in Time. We had a cape that looked really neat, but the Beneath the Shifting Sands uniform was so much comfier. I was surprised, though, that the hood did not get in the way," Mowers said.

"I was excited and shocked when I learned that I made Homecoming Court."

Natalie Bollinger (12)

"I was very surprised and extremely grateful for the entire experience, especially having my team on the sidelines cheering for me and some even crying."

Jocelyn Spencer (12)

"It was a really fun experience, especially because I got to do it with my close friends, and I felt very excited and honored when they announced me to be on it."

Emerson Johngarlo (12)

"I really wanted to be on the Homecoming Court since my older sister was on it when I was a freshman. I was so excited when I heard my name called along with the other girls."

Macey Hepler (12)

"I was shocked and excited, obviously. I am friends with the girls on the court, and we already had a connection, so it was great to experience that with them."

Carlee Kuhn (12)

"Since the other girls and I were already such good friends, it made it so much more fun. When they announced my name to be on Court, I was honestly really surprised, but I felt really honored and was super excited for the opportunity."

As he bares down on the West Allegheny running back, Deshaun McBryde (11) attempts to keep the opponent from gaining positive yardage. McBryde said, "It was a great experience to be able to play in the homecoming game. I loved playing in front of the home crowd. A lot of people had us losing this game, but we came out and got the win." McBryde excelled on the defensive side of the ball as an outside linebacker.

Due to the halftime festivities, Sydney Devey (12) and the rest of the marching band perform prior to kickoff. Devey said, "It's definitely different because of the environment compared to halftime, but I almost like it better because then we can enjoy the football game without having to rush and have a big halftime performance." Devey savored the opportunity to watch the entire thrilling game victory.

On to victory...

On the parade route from the Intermediate School to the football field, Summer Fairman (12) helps lead the cheerleaders to the final destination. "The Homecoming Parade is something I look forward to doing every year. I like having all three squads working together and getting everyone hyped up before the game," Fairman said. She indicated that the Homecoming Game and festivities represented one her most favorite events in which she participated.

NEW MEANING IN field of dance

Due to COVID-19 precautions, the Homecoming Dance relocated to the football field. The students enjoyed refreshments, music, and dancing, primarily in the one end zone. High school secretary Mrs. Carly Roenigk helped chaperone the event and said, "I liked it a lot better outside on the field rather than in the gym. There was so much more space, and it wasn't as hot and crowded as it was in the gym. I think we should have Homecoming outside more often."

Hands up...

Raising her arms, Natalie Bollinger (12) performs the Homecoming routine with the rest of the court. Bollinger said, "I got ideas for the routine from when I danced for a really long time, and I pieced together old dances." Bollinger enjoyed the kick-line most out of the entire routine.

Did I hear that right?

At halftime of the football game against West Allegheny, Jocelyn Spencer (12) hears the news that she garnered the most votes for Homecoming Queen. Spencer said, "I felt very shocked and extremely grateful." After the initial shock wore off, Spencer celebrated with her fellow cheerleaders on the sideline.

Cheering crowd. Awaiting faces. Eager minds. The Homecoming Court proudly paraded one by one before the football game on Friday, September 24. Every princess has to have a prince, and the Homecoming court held no exceptions.

"For my escort, I chose Holden Burkette (12) as my escort because we have been good friends since the upper elementary," Natalie Bollinger (12) said.

"I thought that choosing Cody Dykes (12) would make it fun for the both of us," Macey Hepler (12) said.

"Antonio Giordano (12) and I have been friends since elementary school and I thought that we would have the most fun together," Nicole George (12) said.

"I thought that Calvin Heinle (12) would make this experience even better," Emerson Johngarlo (12) said.

"I chose Jaden Robshaw (12) because I thought that he would have a good time doing it," Carlee Kuhn (12) said.

And, as Homecoming Queen, Jocelyn Spencer (12) said, "I chose Carter Dilts (12) because we are dating, and it only seemed right. But, for good measure, he is a nice and genuine person."

According to all six girls, the Homecoming Court could not have chosen better escorts for this happy occasion. They wanted to spend a very special moment with the special people in their lives.

"I got the tattoo on my neck to show appreciation for my mom. I recently have connected back with her, and I wanted to let her know how much she means to me." Sowerby actually withdrew from the school in early December to re-enroll in New Castle High School.

Bill, by the book...

Mr. Bill Miller worked for the Kiski Area district for 41 years as a teacher, coach, and administrator. His career began at Vandergrift High School in 1950 as a teacher. When KA became a district in 1962, Mr. Miller moved on to the high school where he began as a guidance counselor and eventually became the high school principal. He finished his career as Assistant to the Superintendent for Secondary Education.

Upon his retirement, he remained active serving as President of the Kiski Area Education Foundation and a member of the Kiski Area School Hall of Fame Committee. His unbridled enthusiasm for all things blue and gold earned him the nickname, "Mr. Kiski Area." On September 21, 2014, the school administration officially renamed the high school library the William K. Miller Library & Media Center.

THE MAGICAL impact of MUSIC

Story: M. Knapp (11)

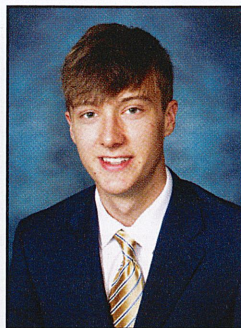

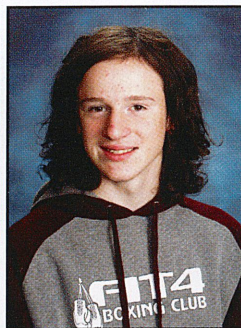

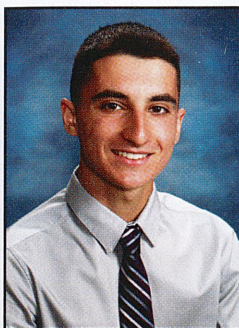

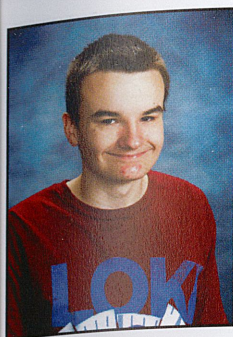

Whether belonging to a school, church, or community choir, playing an instrument in the band, or just simply listening to music in the car, music had an impact on everyone.

Music helped people break out of their shells to become a part of something that they could share with new people.

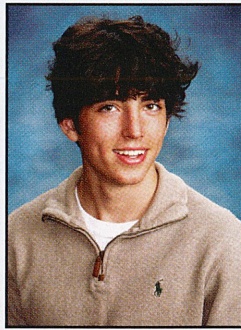

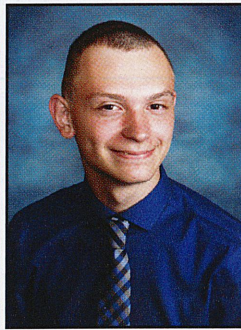

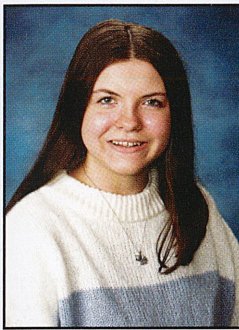

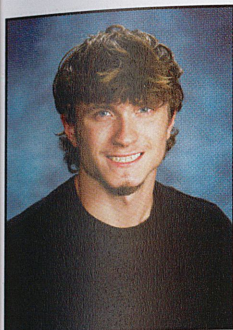

"When I was young, I was bullied for a condition that I was born with that I can't control. I had no one. Then, music came along. I finally realized that what I was actually looking for wasn't to fit in or to quit being bullied, but to stand out for something other than my Tourette's," Bryant Brzozowski (12) said.

Music truly could bring purpose to someone's life. Many seniors wanted to move on and pursue music as their career.

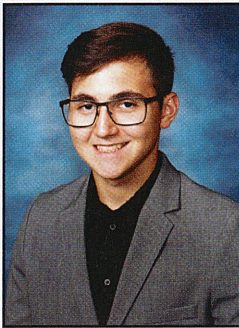

Senior Landon Newell chose to continue his love of music in college. Newell said, "I love how voices come together to sing something beautiful. I've been working with the kids since I was little, so I always knew that I wanted to be an educator. It was later on that I found out that I wanted to be a chorus teacher."

During the Franklin Regional game, Jaden Robshaw (12) dons his whites for the theme of the night and shouts into the megaphone. "We have three megaphones that get passed around between about six of us," Robshaw said. He attended all of the football team's games, both home and away.

While Pittsburghers represented the city that bleeds blue and gold... the senior class bled blue and gold.

Die hard hockey fan Johnathan Drahos (12) reflected on his experiences at Penguins games, "I'm always stoked to watch them play and it's always fun seeing a fight on the ice. It gets everyone in the crowd excited," Drahos said. "It's crazy to hear all of the Pens fans cheer and show all their spirit for the team."

same ecstatic energy at school sporting events, too, as school spirit ran strong among the Class of '22.

Deashaun Rhine (12), who appeared at every Friday night home game, said, "The energy at football games is crazy. Whenever we score or whenever we make a great play, everybody gets so hyped. No matter if you're a freshman or a senior, we all get along being in the student section. You can just feel the excitement the whole way through the crowd," Rhine

From dressing up in the designated theme to the pregame cook outs, seniors celebrated every football game with all they had. The team never lacked the energy needed to play to their fullest, thanks to the outstanding support offered by their student section.

QUARANTINED

together for seven days

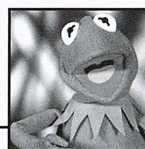

So many lessons. So many friends. A fictional borough in Manhattan, 123 Sesame Street centered around a Brownstone building and lovable Muppet characters aimed to educate and support the nation's youngest.

You have to quarantine for seven days with one of the following characters. Which do you pick and why?

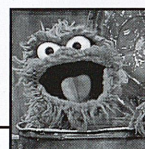

"First, he's hilarious. Second, he's kind and would always look after me. I like how he's always trying to help out children with lessons. I think he would be the most fun."

Imani Johnson

"Kermit is just a hysterical, funny dude to be with. I like that he's always in a great mood, and I think that he would make those seven days go by really quickly."

Devin Burkett

"I would pick Oscar because he keeps to himself, and he's kind of like me in a way—a bit messy, hot-tempered, and loud. I think that we would get along great."

Gerald Schafer

"If I'm going to be stuck in a house with someone, it might as well be someone who can give me food. Besides that, I have a feeling that he wouldn't mind the times when I'm a bit messy."

Nate Nedley (12)

"I actually would pick Grover. He's blue, furry, cuddly, and just an overall nice guy. He could become Super Grover and wipe COVID from the entire planet."

Where to sit...

Sitting in the library during Lunch and Learn, Jorgie Evans (12) talks to her friend Bailee Gray (12) while she eats lunch. "I sit there every day that the library is open for lunch because I don't like sitting on the floor," Evans said. Evans and Gray enjoyed the atmosphere of the library during lunch throughout their high school career.

Naughty or nice?

Ever since fifth grade, Dalin Graham (12) and Logan Lawrence (12) have grown up together. Graham said, "I remember that particular day was Twin Day, and Logan and I both wore our wrestling shirts. He's been there for me through the ups and downs and someone who I could always count on." To this day, Graham and Lawrence share many classes together.

Double digit birthday...

While celebrating Kaylie Smith's (12) 10th birthday, she and Isabelle Shirey (12) pause from the festivities for the camera. Smith said, "We met in fifth grade and have been best friends ever since. We've had a lot of sleep overs through the years." During the sleep overs, Smith and Shirey play-fought and wrote stories together.

a casual tea party. Mrs. Bradman

DRESS TO impress and School dances provide perfect opportunities for students to look their best

Story: K. Bombalski (12)

With senior year came one last chance to dress to the nines for an evening of fun with friends. Dances brought all students together for a display of different looks and styles. However after three years of experience the seniors took the spotlight.

Payton Sullivan (12) reflected on her previous experiences with dress shopping in a positive light.

"It's more than just finding a dress you like," Sullivan said. "It's about finding a dress to make memories in and to have a good time shopping with friends."

The stereotype of only the girls excited to show off did not hold since even the guys took the rare chance to wear something nicer than athletic shorts and tee shirts.

Chad Hepler (12) went to his first dance of high school his senior year, and found a new side of his friends after seeing them dressed so nicely.

"I didn't even know they had that sense of style," Hepler said.
"I barely recognized them; they looked so fancy."

As seniors said their goodbyes, fancy outfits served as a strong reminder of a night of music and friends. This represented more than just some colorful fabric and patterns.

To remember her father who recently passed away suddenly, Carlee Kuhn (12) displays her larkspur arm tattoo. Kuhn said, "I got the tat at True Image in New Kensington. My dad's ashes are infused in the ink which allows him to forever live on with me."

In her kitchen, tattoo artist Michael Charley created the rose and butterfly design for both Kat Hand (12) and her mom. "A couple of hours before my mom's 40th birthday, we got matching tattoos. I like that we will forever be connected through the experience."

BEST advice

"NO CULOTTES EVER. THEY DON'T LOOK GOOD, AND THEY WOULD NEVER WORK WITH ANYTHING ELSE."

MADISON CONIGLIO (12)

An expression of art and honor, seniors explain why they chose that particular tattoo

"I don't want low rise jeans to come back. I think they are so uncomfortable."

Grace Claxon (12)

What fashion trend do you hope never comes back?

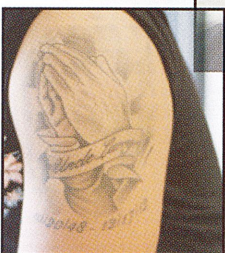

Created at True Image in New Kensington, Natalie Bollinger's (12) arm displays four hearts. "The four hearts represent me, my dad, my mom, and my sister. We all are getting the same tattoo with different hearts filled in."

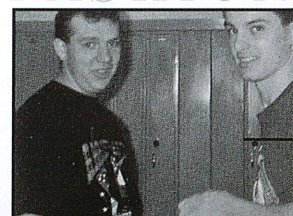

After 17 years of living with his grandparents and on the streets, Elijah Sowerby (12) had Josh from Doodle Pad Studio in Vandergrift create this tribute to his mother. Sowerby said, "When my mom came back into my life, everything changed for the better. I now do everything I can to improve myself, just so I can make her proud."

On his April 6 birthday, Brayden Dunmire (12) got a spiritual tattoo in memory of his uncle. Dunmire said, "Uncle Larry and I used to do everything together. He was my best friend growing up. I miss him every day."

Home run performance...

During the Annual Key Club Talent Show, Lucas Vrudney performs Home by Philip Phillips to a rapt audience. Vrudney won first place.

For Audrey DeTurck (12), an unexpected talent gave her a new point of view during an exciting time in her life.

"I learned to do a shoulder stand around the time I joined guard. Everyone was really impressed by it. My previous skills have helped me excel when I try new things like that."

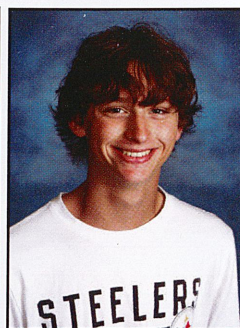

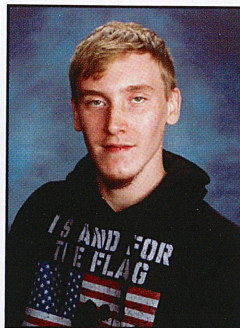

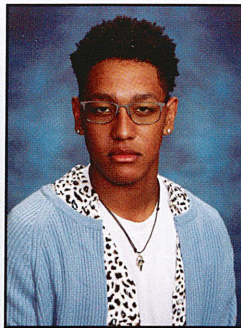

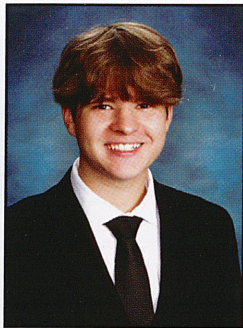

A member of both the color guard and the winter guard, DeTurck flourished because of her previous ability. "My tumbling experience has made me a better guard member. It gave me confidence in an activity I love."

Meanwhile, Lucas Vrudney (12) improved his guitar skills through careful practice, which led to special opportunities such as performing solos in marching band shows.

"I was seven years old when I started playing guitar.

It was something I was super passionate about from a young age, and after years of work, I'm now able to play cool and difficult things that I've always wanted to play."

Story: R. Frye (11)

Accident-ridden teenager reveals injuries

"THE PAIN OF
YESTERDAY IS THE STRENGTH OF TODAY."

KATIE SHAW (11)

All wrapped up...

After a horrific injury sliding home against the Freeport Yellowjackets, Connor Flemm (11) spent eight weeks in a cast to heal his ankle. "The worst was when my foot itched for whatever reason. I remember using a coat hanger to get relief," Flemm said. As of December 27, doctors cleared him to play baseball in the spring.

As the sunset painted the sky with the hot pink, light yellow, and soft orange that hazed over the field, parents sat in their lawn chairs and ate the concession stand food that the lingering smell of fried goodness convinced them to buy. Athletes played their hearts out on the field until hopefully, they beat their opponents. Stress poured in at the end of the game whenever they tried to stay ahead for the remaining few minutes. The team had high hopes until Connor Flemm (11) landed on his arm, trying to catch himself, causing a broken and dislocated elbow.

"I was running with the ball, and all I remember is no longer running and having to catch myself, hoping for the best," Flemm said.

The devastating injury may have slowed Flemm down, but he did not let it stop him from doing what he loved. After months of recovery, he finally could play with his team again, not expecting what would come next.

The ball got launched into the air and Flemm just rounded third base and slid into home, not knowing what was about to happen.

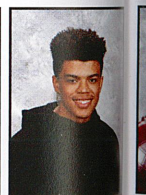

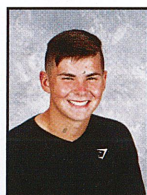

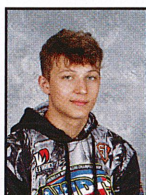

"I was just sliding into home plate as usual, and I heard a loud snap. Later, we found out that I had dislocated my ankle, along with breaking my tibia and fibula," Flemm said.

The accident-ridden teenager did not let this injury discourage him either; however, he could not participate in the football season.

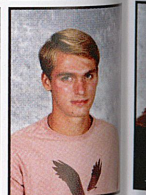

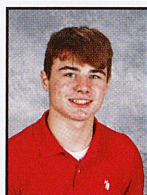

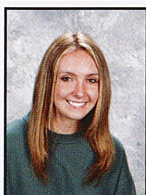

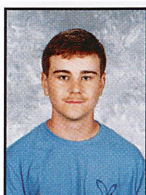

"I went to every game and supported my team, but I wished that I was out there," he said.

Flemm has not participated in any sports since March while traveling his long journey to recovery. "But, the wait will be worth it," Flemm said.

THAT FACE SAYS IT ALL

From an early age, games and toys became a huge part of life. Used as educational tools, the hours spent playing that one board game or with that one toy shaped our minds and thinking.

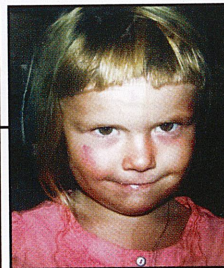

From Lincoln Logs to Sorry, and from 500-Rummy to Legos, toys and games kept us busy and gave us all opportunities to spend quality time with friends and family.

Monster High Dolls

"I had a ton of them. I liked them because their arms and legs moved, they were all based off of monsters, and they had books that came with them. Their movies were my favorite, and I collected them after I watched them."

Avery Toy (11)

Barbie Dolls

"For as long as I can remember, I played all the time with my Barbie Dolls. I always had to have the newest one released. I had the Barbie house, car, pool, clothes, and all accessories. I can't imagine how much money we spent on Barbie."

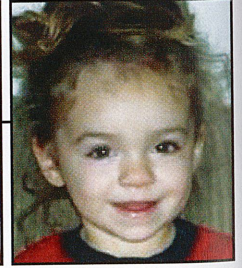

Hannah Blankenship (11)

Old Maid

"I loved to play Old Maid with my grandpa because he was really smart and taught me how to play many games. We would play during holidays, after school, and just about any time I went to my grandparents' house."

Jordan Acheson (11)

Candy Land

"I've played Candy Land since I was about five years old. My papa used to play with me all the time. I always had to be green, and Papa was always blue. I'd say that I won about 75% of the time because he always liked to let me win."

Phillips said, "We punched each other almost every day, but when it comes to lollipops, we knew how to get along." At the ages of eight, seven, and five, their grandmother snapped the picture.

Friends for life...

In their yard in Vandergrift, Lily and Joe Zornow (11) pause for a picture at the ages of five and four. Joe Zornow said, "As far back as I can remember, Lily and I have always gotten along. We look out for each other and enjoy spending our time together." Joe Zornow added that he wore shoes most of the time and didn't go around barefoot outside his yard.

NOT YOUR typical phys ed CLASS

Story: A. Carion (11)

Built into cultures around the world, dancing often took center stage. After all, research has proven that dance reduces stress, and some believed that art shines through movement. Dance has traveled through centuries, generations, and styles. Mrs. Padasak (fac) took matters into her own hands and decided to incorporate dance into gym class.

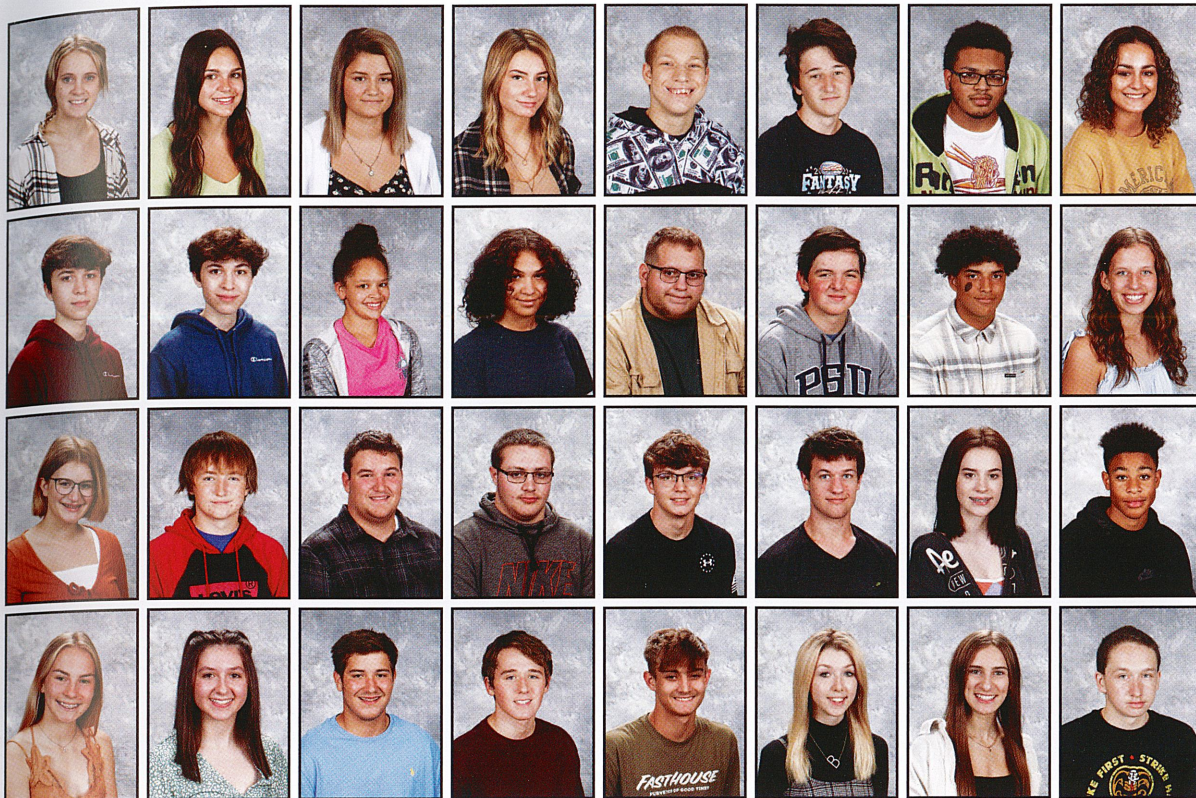

"As a Phys-Ed teacher, my duty is to teach dance rhythm and movement, so I chose to do a TikTok dance in gym class. I wanted the students to step outside of their comfort zones and explore creativity and connect dance movements to activities," Padasak said.

Not everyone would share a passion for dance, but they all participated in this innovative, creative way to stay active.

"I had a blast," Braden Mika (11) said sarcastically, "It enriched my ability to dance and feel more athletic and on time cue eye roll."

Kendall Kernan (11) and her group participated in The Get Up by Blanco Brown after they saw the examples shown in the presentation.

"The song was fun for me to do, and we were not able to learn the actual moves to it in a timely manner, so we made up our own choreography," Kernan said.

What started off as an inside middle-school joke turned into an actual gathering of people in Casey Gorman's (11) honor. Gorman said, "When I found out that my friends were planning the club, I joined in and took it to a new level with clothing and accessories." Overall, about 20 students belonged to the club.

Karen Gordon uses the office pay phone to make a call. Students needed a single dime to make any local call back then.

Race to friendship...

Laken Robshaw (11) shows off her car with friends from Ohio and PA that she met while racing. "I enjoy seeing my friends from all around the country, and I enjoy the excitement I get when I win," Robshaw said. She claimed runner up at Bracket Finals at Dragway 42 in East Salem, Ohio.

Seated in the driver's seat of her car, Laken Robshaw (11) pulled up to the staging area of Dragway 42's drag strip. Her foot hovering over the gas pedal, she watched the stop light intently. One amber light flashed on, then the next. As the third yellow light shined, Robshaw slammed her foot on the gas. She crossed the starting line at the same time the fourth light turned green, making her start time exactly 0.000 seconds, an astonishing feat.

Not only did Robshaw race all across the country, from Georgia to Ohio, but she also got to make some extra cash in doing so. On occasion in drag racing, the drag strips would award the winners and runner ups with money instead of a medal or award.

"One time I won $1000 as a runner up at Dragway 42 in Ohio. That was the most I've ever won while racing," Robshaw said.

Robshaw had drag raced for three years and gathered inspiration from those she knew best.

"My older cousin got into drag racing before both me and my brother. I remember going to watch him race, and then I became interested once my brother began racing. I only ever get nervous when I'm competing against them," Robshaw said.

Video gamers describe meaning behind gaming sessions

"If I'm having a bad day, I hop on a single player to release the stress and anger that built up throughout the day, and after a while, I have calmed down enough to apologize to those affected," Preston Fedoruk (11) said.

While seated in their gaming spot, holding the remote control comfortably in their hands, using muscle memory to press the necessary buttons to successfully play the game, these introverts used gaming to escape reality. During these gaming sessions, the players forgot what reality felt like or how harsh the world treated them.

"It gives me a couple minutes to escape reality and life because it sucks," Dakota McDonald (11) said.

Theater/GMK builds outgoing personalities

Take it to the chapel...

In front of the home crowd at the game against Fox Chapel on October 8, Caylie Tursky (10) checks her footing during a cheer. Tursky said, "When your job is to excite the crowd, you have to be outgoing and motivating. Cheering has helped me to become a bit more uninhibited." The home team lost to the Foxes 21-35.

Perhaps a bit stereotypical—however still true—kids involved in the theater department carried a reputation of energy and enthusiasm on and off the stage. Many members have mastered the ability to take the character from on stage and bring it into everyday life.

Garrett Seymour (10), despite his gap in age from the usually staring seniors, started to present his bright personality on the screens of GMK.

"I've never really had a problem being myself in front of others," Seymour said. "Having GMK as an outlet to express myself between the musical and marching band is perfect for me."

Xaiden Connelly (10) also worked his outward charm. However, he did so from behind the set as a stage crew member.

"Being a part of such a wonderful group makes it really easy to be yourself," Connelly said. "Everyone brings so much energy and positivity that it's hard to lose your confidence."

One part time introvert Caylie Tursky (10) had thoughts about how her personality seemed to change when on the stage.

"I am a different person when it comes to theater and cheering. I've served stage crew for a few years, and I love the interaction that we have with the actors. I get lost in the plot of the show a lot of times, and it's just so much fun to be a part of such a wonderful experience that lets us all step outside of our box to become the characters. Even helping out backstage has brought me out of my shell at times," Tursky said.

Morning steps...

On an early December Day B, Marlie Tedesco (10) and Kylie Shondelmyer (10) get in morning steps before the start of fifth period. Shondelmyer said, "We usually just walk around in the mornings until the bell rings to go to class." On Day B, Shondelmyer headed to English with Mrs. Baum, and Tedesco went to geometry with Mr. Culler.

Quick reboot...

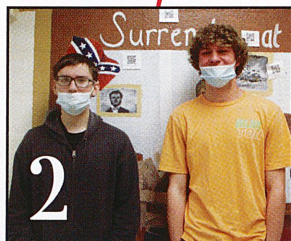

Just prior to lunch in his Cav Time room with Mrs. Eichner, Nathan Witt (10) catches a quick break to get ready to eat. "My Day B schedule is a bit rougher than my Day A one. There's a lot more work involved on B days, and I have to use my brain a lot more," Witt said. To add to his busy day, Witt lifted after school on Day Bs to prepare for baseball season.

Silly idea makes for great angle on portrait

The typical funny photo contained one of the following: a camera filter, a goofy facial expression, an embarrassing scene, or some combination of the three. However, sometimes the photographer's actions made the shot hilarious.

"My friend Faith Boyle (12) had a photography competition coming up, and she needed a model," Lindsay Bush (10) said. "I suggested it to my good friend Calder who just finished his tennis season. We ended up deciding to take photos of him at the tennis court with his racket, but we couldn't figure out a good angle."

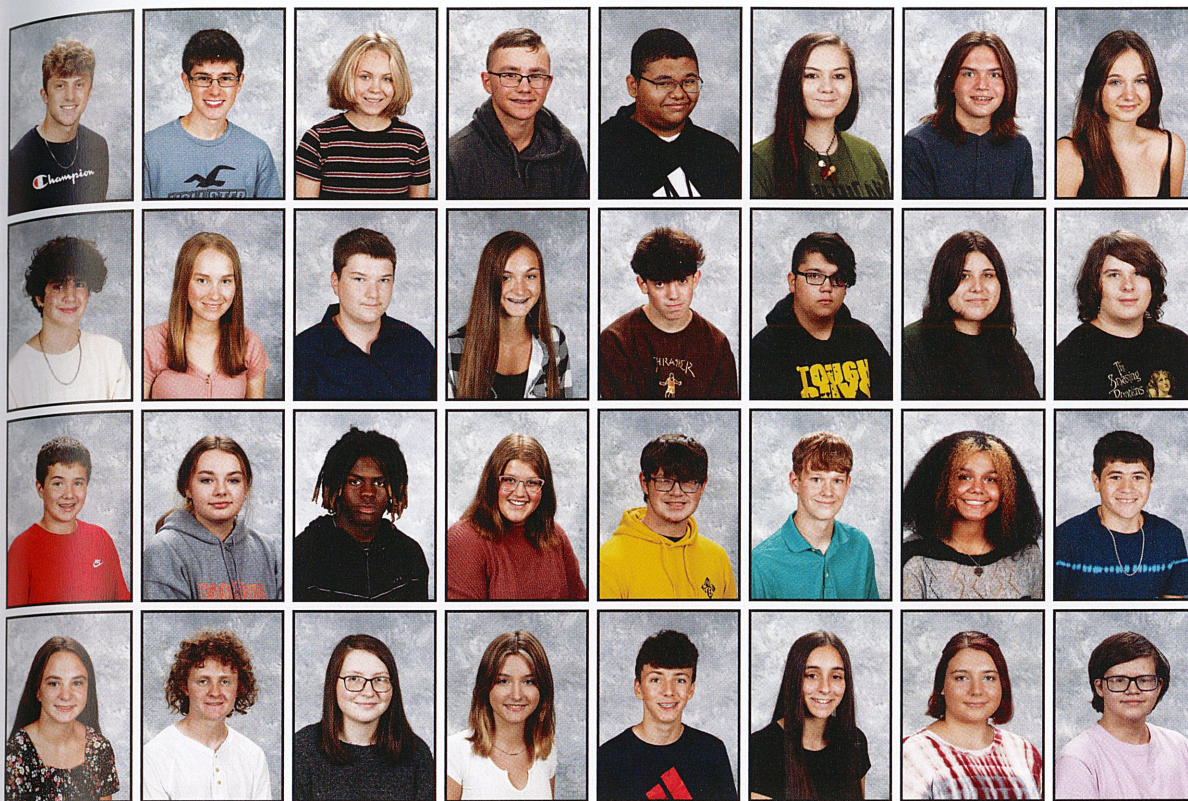

Improvisation ensued.

"Faith pulled over a trash can and stood on it while I posed. It was a little rainy, but we got her the shots she needed," Calder Gee (10) said.

"The photos turned out well, even though we laughed the whole time," Bush said.

Dwellers discuss aspects of living on a working farm

She heard the herd...

Like ducks in a row, baby cows on the Bowman Farm in Bell Township line up to say hello to Mrs. Lynch as she gets the mail. "The cows on the farm are very friendly and love human interaction," Lynch said. A variety of types, colors, and sizes made up the herd.

Seventeen pigeons, 150 chickens, two ducks, 18 dogs, 40 cows, and 40 pigs. Life on a farm could get crowded, overwhelming, and even smelly.

For three sophomores, living on a working farm had both its positives and negatives. At his family's farm near Northmoreland Park, Carter Martin (10) discussed a predator that entered the property.

"We once had a fox that set up her den near our house. The fox kept killing our chickens. We ended up getting our dog Hector (Catahoula breed) to protect the birds. He ended up killing and eating the fox, as well as her cubs."

Still, one student talked about times where she had to pitch in.

Emersyn Lynch (10) said, "I have helped out from time to time. I have loaded and unloaded hay and cleaned out the barn and stalls."

However, not all aspects of farm life proved difficult. Some brought joy.

"Despite not having much responsibility over the land and animals, I enjoy taking my dogs on long walks every day because of how much land we have," Hannah Dickun (10) said.

Similarly, Lynch said, "I love being surrounded by my whole family since we all live on the Bowman land. Some people say that there's a stench to the property, but 15 years living there has made me immune. We have a total of 130 acres, and we love four-wheeling, hunting, and fishing on the land. It's a great life."

"I was jumping out of pure happiness because the dude was running his mouth so much, and Brock just knocked him out," Andrew Westcoat (10) said.

While an unfortunate turnout for Franklin Regional, "It was the coolest play in my career," Wilkins said with a smile on his face, "I was tired, and I knew that when I hit him, the game was over, so I was pretty excited."

Songs with a message...

The Fresh Beat Band had four characters going on adventures and solving everyday problems. Fan Jordan Peterson (9) said, "I really love music, and I loved that there was this show that had wonderful songs with morals for issues that we deal with every day. It was a great show, and I miss it so much." The Fresh Beat Band ran from 2009 to 2013.

The memories came flooding back when thinking about varied aspects of childhood. From TV shows to everyday happenings, youthful experiences molded us all. As many of these items no longer existed, individuals from around the school tell what they miss most.

"I personally miss Red Ribbon Week and field trips from my elementary school years," Emily Zornow (9) said.

"I miss running out on the field with my fellow students after an amazing victory from the football team," Nathan Summerhill (9) said.

This kicked off just the beginning of missed things within students' lives. The shows, trips, people, activities that disappeared right out from under us will always leave a trail of memories.

"We were supposed to go to Disney for vacation, but COVID hit, and that trip got canceled. To say that I was sad would not do it justice," Baylee Davis (9) said.

"I miss the school holiday parties that we used to have; they were always fun and brought smiles to every student in that class," Jordan Bielunis (9) said.

It is safe to say that nearly everyone missed something that no longer existed in society.

"I long for them to bring back all the Netflix shows that ended with a cliffhanger," Emily Sarti (9) said.

"I miss The Fresh Beat Band because it was my favorite show as a kid, and the songs are forever lodged in my heart," Jordan Peterson (9) said.

SALT OR SWEET?

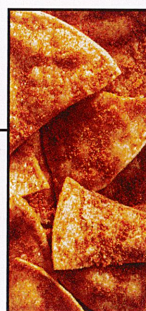

During the late hours of night, hunger set in, and we all reached for that favorite snack. From a bag of crunchy chips to a bowl of smooth ice cream, sometimes it became a daunting task to find that one single food that would work. However, six freshmen knew exactly what would satisfy their grumbling stomachs around midnight.

Pop Tart

"My all time midnight snack would have to be S'mores Pop Tarts. So good."

Dimitri Spagnola (9)

Sweet rewards...

While in Mrs. Novak's Principles of Baking and Pastry class, Matthew Vigna (9) and Tylar Hanley (9) whip up some cookies. "My favorite part is getting to eat the food I make afterwards," Vigna said. He also indicated that he originally scheduled the class so he could eat more at school.

In Room 138, Tyler Kush (9) grates some parmesan cheese over his pasta which he made himself. "I really like cooking because it brings my family together," Kush said. He had cooked for about four years and enjoyed experimenting with new recipes.

Students discuss their idols

Story: A. Carion (11)

Students' role models originated from various areas of life, including family, friends, celebrities, and educators. For Branden Bigley (9), his dad served as his inspiration.

"I look up to my dad because he motivates me every day to be a better person. He motivates me to keep pushing and be the best version of myself I can be," Bigley said, "he inspires me just simply by being my dad."

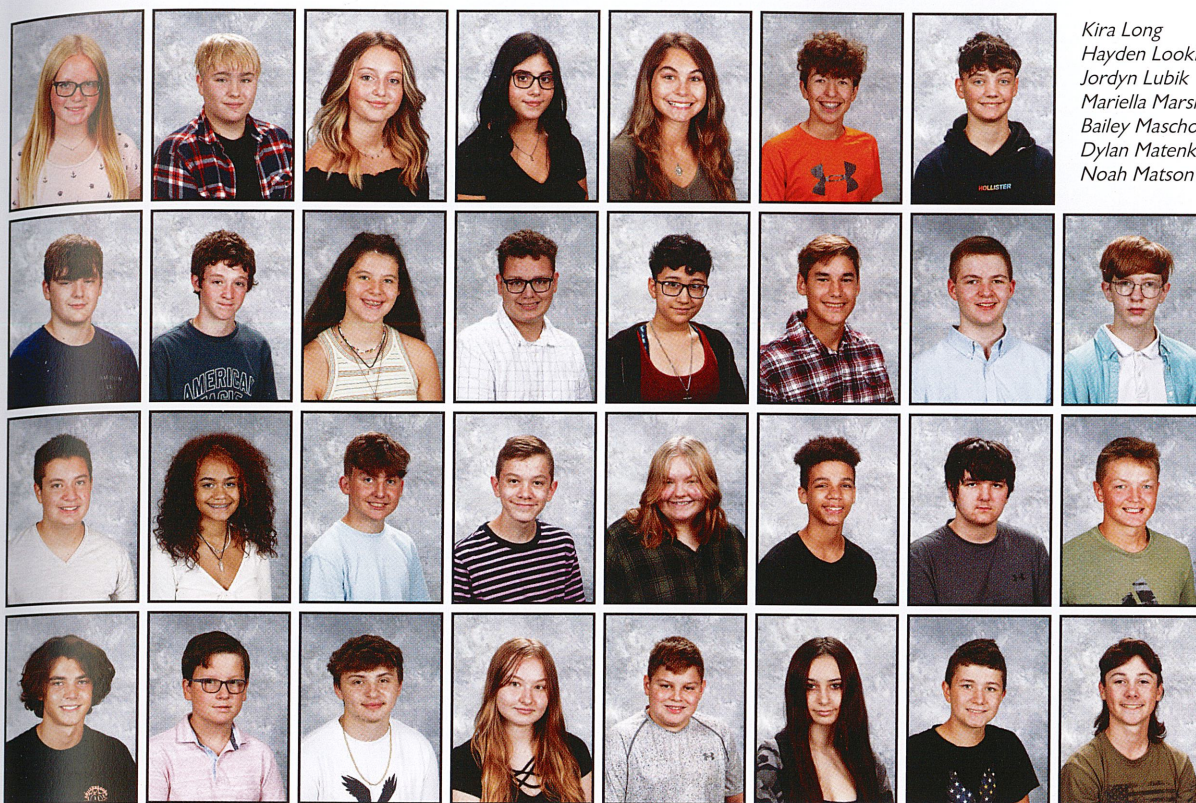

Landon Kucic (9) sought an idol farther from home and named Cam Newton as the person he looked up to.

"Cam Newton is the main reason I got into football," said Kucic, "I'm inspired by his work ethic. He worked hard for what he has accomplished."

While many people looked up to sports players, someone as common as a teacher could also have a great impact on someone's life. Tiffany Stitt (9) claimed Mrs. Royer had the biggest impact on her.

"Because Mrs. Royer always makes the classes fun, and she is really good at teaching Spanish," Stitt said, "she inspires me by just being encouraging and overall, she is just the best."

After the event, Bible Club provided snacks for those who attended.

THE GOOD

Story: R. Frye (11)

and not so good old days

Big changes...

Opening in 1989, the Kiski Area Intermediate School sent ninth graders to the high school for the first time. Mr. Jankowski said, "I was in fourth grade when they opened the Intermediate school. I was part of the last class to go to East Vandergrift Elementary."

Children laughing. People crying. Stressful strides. The middle school years have come to an end where students found themselves, met their best friends, and set paths for the upcoming years. The sound of thundering footsteps when that last bell rings to mark the end of middle school years lingered.

"During my seventh grade year, I was doing well in all of my classes, but then COVID hit and I almost failed my classes," Victoria Remencus (9) said.

Alyssa Ruggiero (9) said, "The worst thing that happened to me during middle school is when I got diagnosed with depression."

Hardships tended to leave a footprint behind more than the positive experiences for most people, but a couple did look at the light at the end of the tunnel.

"The best thing that happened to me was getting nominated for Commendable Cavalier by Mrs. Ignozzi," Tiffany Stitt (9) said.

"I really love the amount of physical activity we got all throughout middle school including winning third overall for the Junior High swim team," Riley Yute (9) said.

The black and white film over these memories would always remain, but the color of present day would allow for new memories to occur.

SECOND star from the RIGHT

Members of Winter Guard share thoughts on new show

Described as a boastful and careless boy. Claimed greatness, but often questioned. Symbolized the selfishness, forgetfulness and self-centeredness of childhood. Peter Pan has made it back into present day student life with the show Second Star To The Right for Winter Guard 2022.

"The show title reminds me of royalty and mystery," Lauren Ciuca (9) said, "I think that with the difficulty of the tosses in the show, it is going to be a really amazing year."

This show proved to have difficult tosses, moves, turns, and twists. The members struggled to get it, but the show looked outstanding.

"My left-handed 45 is the hardest move for me because it is with my non-dominant hand, but I know that if I work for it, I will eventually get it," Elizabeth Fitch (9) said.

Guns a blazing...

During the opener of the marching band's Beneath the Shifting Sands show, Rebekah Frye (9) prepares to slam the gun tip into the ground just before a transition move. Frye said, "The work involved in this year's show was fast, difficult, and spinny. It had to be if we wanted to beat every other band out there, which we did." Frye just completed her second year performing with the color guard.

Don't tip it over...

Just prior to the start of the school year, at an In-Service training on student engagement, Mr. Williamson does his best to pull out a block without tipping over the tower. "I try to use a lot of humor, real life applications, and I invest time into getting to know my students, both in and out of the classroom. That's how I engage students," Williamson said. The senior graduating classes at the school voted him Teacher of the Year four times, the last in 2017.

Super Santa chalk art...

During numerous visits to Mr. Moran's classroom, Mythaniel Hoak (10) finishes his Christmas masterpiece. Hoak said, "I like to draw and took a summer art class to improve my skills. I got into the Christmas spirit and wanted to draw this for Mr. Moran." Hoak had Mr. Moran for Algebra I his freshman year and stopped by room 307 often to say hello.

Students followed different paths as they journeyed through learning experiences every day.

"I've learned so much more from engaging activities during a lesson, rather than just plain old memorization," Ashlee Bair (12) said.

"I do think that it is beneficial to do activities during a lesson because I believe that most kids learn better that way," Nicholas Debich (9) said.

Variety in a classroom proved the effectiveness of those different ways of learning, whether a teacher chose straight lecturing or having a more activity-based lesson plan.

For Tiffany Stitt (9), she preferred a more traditional approach. "I personally appreciate how Mr. Pugliese teaches. He gives us notes to write down and follow, and I always do well on his tests," Stitt said.

Not only did it matter how the teacher taught a certain topic, but also how the teacher felt about it.

Clayton Smith (12) said, "Students can pick up on how a teacher is feeling, and we can reflect off of that but an interactive activity can not hurt.

It helps my brain understand the situation better."

Algebra II and Geometry teacher Mrs. Hald said, "I try to get them up and moving by including a scavenger hunt. I feel that kids usually learn better through an activity because it is like a game and not a boring task."

In addition to cutting open a rat, the class dissected a fetal pig and a cow's eye.

YEARS AGO

Words. Lines. Phrases...

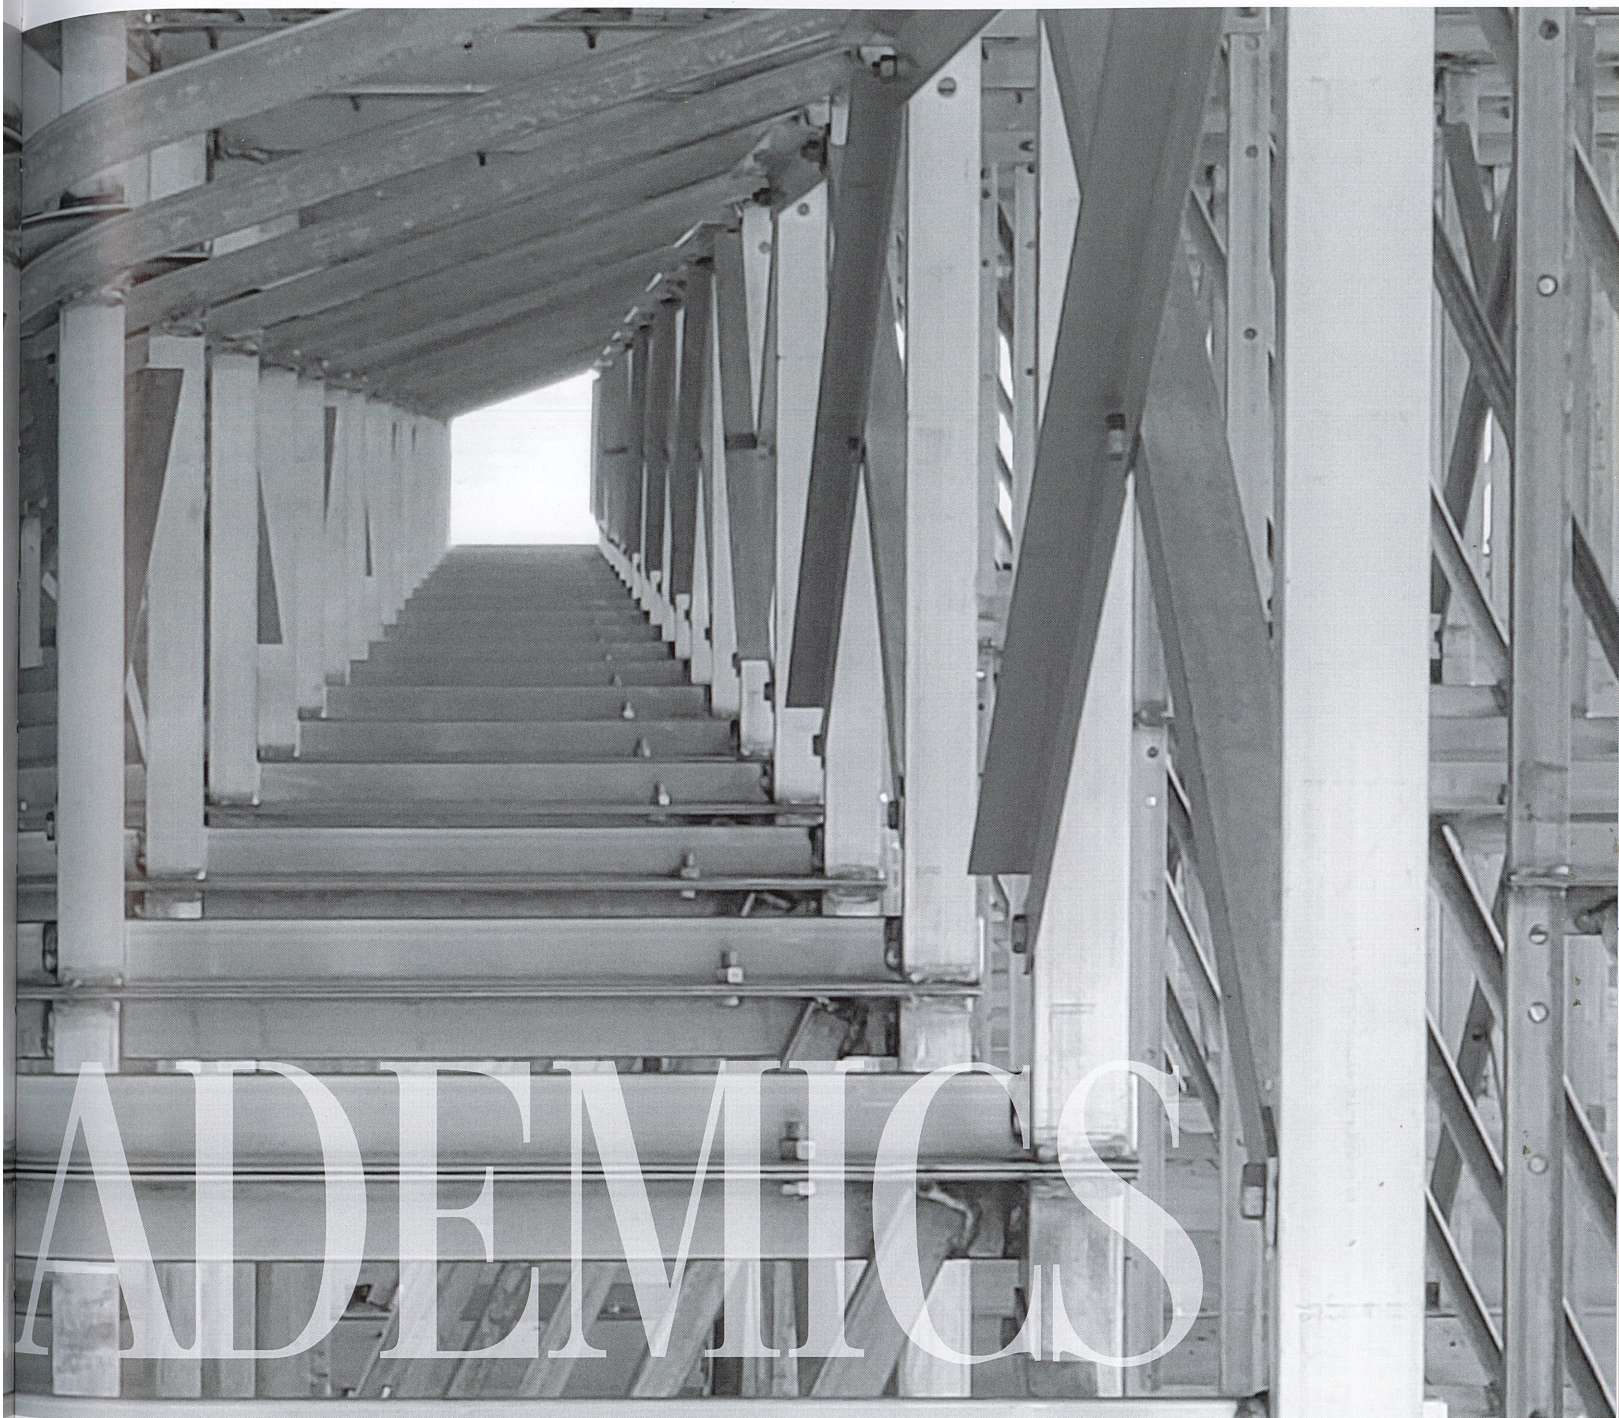

In the year 1977, nine teachers taught business-related classes at the high school. Today, the facility houses only four, a reflection of how much has changed over the years.

No longer did students have to use manual typewriters to complete assignments.

Also, with the advancement of electric typewriters, students no longer had to manually hit the carriage return lever to advance to the next line. Additionally, the need for white correction paper to fix errors diminished with the invention of the correction ribbon.

Now, everything has become electronic, and correcting errors has shifted to pressing a series of buttons. The addition of applications like Grammarly has made tasks a whole lot easier for students than in the past.

THE fine art of PERMS

Doing a permanent wave, also known as a perm, on a client could take several hours. The two parts to a perm involve wrapping the client's hair around hair rods and applying a chemical treatment. The chemicals can cause burns and other discomfort without proper protection, and all this requires skill and practice.

Students discuss learning preferences

You just finished reading Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet in Ms. Heasley's class. You have four choices to prove what you learned: traditional exam, class presentation, hands-on project, or packet of worksheets to complete. Which do you prefer or eliminate, and why?

"I feel like I can be myself when I do a hands-on project because I have the freedom to make the project more my style, and I can make up the rules," Levi Hansen (11) said.

"I would much rather do a packet because it is easier to do all at once and just get it all out of the way. It wouldn't carry on for many class periods," Chassidy Kamer (11) said.

Everyone has his own likes and dislikes, his preferences and ways to succeed on assignments.

Alivia Sherbondy (9) said, "I would eliminate the test because I have to come prepared for anything that may come my way, whereas for a presentation, I know what the material is so I can be more prepared and comfortable with it."

Students who would rather do anything other than stand in front of the class and give a presentation agreed with Brock Wilkins (12) when he said, "I am fully against the presentation idea because it is totally out of my comfort zone to stand up in front of the class."

Band completes outstanding season with historic performance

Story: J. Glunt (12)

After a year spent deserted from music and buried in silence, a mirage finally came into view for the marching band: a comeback season with the potential for great success, despite immeasurable odds. Beneath the Shifting Sands, a show boasting powerful melodies against a vibrant landscape of dunes, rose above the competition and brought the marching band gold. In the wake of a modified 2020 season, the band eagerly anticipated the return to normalcy; however, many band members had never experienced "normal."

"While this season had many aspects that were more challenging, I got so much out of all the hard work. I felt so connected to my fellow band members, and even though I felt nervous before competitions, I got excited the moment we started playing the show," Ella Volpe (9) said.

Upperclassmen also basked in the glory of performance. "Every competition and event is bittersweet because it is the last one, but our amazing show has satisfied the disappointment I felt after last year, and then some," Benjamin Ruggles (12) said.

If you could become any instrument what one would you pick, and why?

"I would probably be a trumpet because it's loud, just like me."

Teachers reflect on effects of 2020 school year

If someone could only use a single word to sum up this past year, that word might be change. With the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic still lingering on, as well as other unexpected challenges like flooding in the school, students at Vo-Tech had to adapt to a lot of change.

Dayus Fruechtel (12) noticed how the pandemic affected some of her peers' academics in the long run.

Fruechtel said, "All of the time at home during the lockdown caused a big learning gap to form in the students. Now, you can really see some of them excelling in their fields, while others are falling behind."

After moving to Kiski mid-last year, Ryan McGinnis (10) had to adapt to not only one, but two new schools.

McGinnis said, "At my old school in Texas, all of the shops and classes were in the same building. It was difficult at first to adjust to having the shops in a separate building, but it's gotten much better. I've been having a lot of fun here."

As someone studying cosmetology at Vo-Tech, Noah Shirley (12) found it difficult to receive his full learning experience.

"It's hard to navigate all of the regulations that have been put in place by the Board of Cosmetology due to the pandemic for both the students and teachers. It's been a learning experience for us all."

Practicing skills...

Working to get better at her trade, Savanna Atkinson (10) places hair curlers in a mannequin's hair. Atkinson said, "At first, I wasn't sure if I wanted to do Tech, but I ended up getting in and decided to stick with it." Atkinson signed up for cosmetology, and she said she has learned many other life skills on her path thus far.

With Aliahya Green (10), Clayton Smith (12) cuts the plastic off a slab of ribs. Smith said, "I hate working with eggs. That's all we used my sophomore year, and the mess we made afterwards was horrible." Smith gladly switched out of Health Occupations and into Culinary after his freshman year.

1 Jameson Sales (12)

"This picture is just masterful, buddy. It's so creative. You captured the same fence on the right as about six other students. Still, you found that spider web. I don't think I can think of a better example of this Beauty in Lines project than you did with that spun silk."

Tied for first place.

2 Caleb Custer (11)

"I'll confess this right now. In no other assignment asking for great lines and balance will anything ever in the history of mankind ever beat this picture. It's just mathematically perfect. I would imagine that a pic like this one would inspire Escher to make a new drawing. I'm just in awe of this one. Great job, Caleb. It's beautiful."

Tied for first place.

3 Jake Motosicky (12)

"Who doesn't love a photo with Deashaun Rhine framed perfectly in a sliver? I do. Jacob, this met the requirements of the prompt and blew me away. I couldn't figure out how you did this. A fork time was all I could think of. I finally figured out that you took this pic through the holes in a chair. It's wonderful."

4 Adaleine Marangoni (12)

"Question #2 had you finding a great example of two or more parallel lines with positive slopes. I had some phenomenal examples for this. Still, none better than this one. I so appreciated your eye in even spotting this, Adaleine. And why on earth are those plants heading northeast? For the sun? I'm so intrigued by this shot."

Draws me right in...

For the final assessment on straight lines in Mr. Fantaski's ACM class, Sheyenne Muschick (11) demonstrates parallel lines with a shot from under the new bleachers. Muschick said, "I love this picture because there are so many lines to look at. In order to get this shot, I had to put my phone under the seats so that I was able to see the top and bottom."

Students take mind-blowing photographs

Inspiration can strike anywhere, anytime, any place. Both Mr. Fantaski and Mrs. Gracey assigned their students a project that creatively involved cell phone photography. The assignment for Gracey involved taking framed pictures.

Hailey Briggs (11) said, "What inspired me to capture the pictures I got was to try and get a unique framing. I wanted to think outside the box to get something really unique."

"My favorite part was seeing my final product because I surprised myself with the cool-looking pictures I took," Sophia Hranica (9) said.

One student had a more practical and economical approach to the project.

"I just took random pictures," Brenden Lott (10) said.

Fantaski's project included capturing the beauty in natural lines in the outside world, which encouraged students to really think creatively for inspirations.

"I guess I just have an eye for these types of things, I just saw the vines and thought it'd be perfect," Adaleine Marangoni (12) said, "I really like the outdoors and the freedom that came with the project."

"I just looked down and saw some interesting lines that looked like they would work for the project," Andrew Alexander (11) said.

Though inspired by different aspects, their objectives remained the same: to capture pictures that met the standards for the project.

"I was just inspired by the grade that was about to go in the gradebook," Sheyenne Muschick (11) said, "but I really enjoyed the freedom that was given to us to be able to take some pretty amazing pictures."

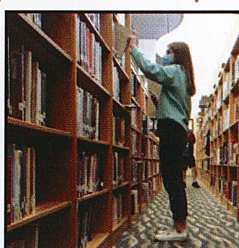

Framed...

While taking framing shots in Photoshop class, Ethan Ledbetter snaps a photo of Andrew Fleming. "We picked random objects to be our frame and were basically messing around and ended up with a great photo," Fleming said. Ledbetter and Fleming became friends seven years ago.

Emily Zeskus (9)...

Bri Pollock (9)...

"My friend Sylvia Chin (10) was in the library so I asked her to be in my photo. She put her fingers up like a frame, and I took the picture."

To get a picture for the yearbook spread, Hallie Zidek (10) and Kylie Zaffina (10) used the color guard mirrors to frame Zidek inside her own arm.

Students discuss their talents

Skills can come naturally to someone or come later in life through practice. Everyone has skills, but each individual has a different, unique, or special type of skill. Cooking, running, jumping, testing, talking, working, etc. represent just a few of the 50,000 skills of the entire world.

As for Emma Beck (12), her passion falls under designing. "My family inspired me to create everything in Graphics Design this year because they are my biggest influence and made me who I am today," Beck said.

Under the creating category falls Jack Coleman (12), whose eye falls for art. "I design what I think is cool, what I like, or what is in my life constantly. I enjoy art because I can express myself," Coleman said.

Skills can also include doing physically demanding activities like sports, actively serving in the military, and for Rebekah Frye (9) this includes color/winter guard.

"I really love and live for participating in guard. I practice all the time, and sometimes I still do screw up and I need to work on some different skills to make sure that I master them for the shows," Frye said.

Three high school years calm fear of speaking in public

Glossophobia: The fear of speaking in public places. Certainly, the transition between middle school and high school instigated a lot of stress, sleepless nights, and anxiety. Beyond the usual changes, students had to tackle new tasks, namely speaking confidently in front of their peers and others.

"I really didn't have a problem talking before others because of the Kevin Croney Foundation. I've had to present in front of an auditorium full of people since I was in fifth grade. My experience with addressing masses of people made it easier to tackle smaller scale projects in high school," Olivia Croney (12) said.

While Croney found inspiration in a worthy cause, another student recalled a more personal and musical experience.

"The most memorable presentation I had was for tenth grade English class. We had to present song lyrics to practice interpreting phrases in preparation for our poetry unit. I chose the song My 2 Lovely Uncles by Oney & Supermega." Dylan Arner (12) said.

With three years of high school under their belts, the opportunity to mature settled some nerves.

"There's definitely a big change from my freshman year to now. I was always nervous presenting until we started virtual schooling. After our year in isolation, I found it hard to care about presenting; my nerves had totally dissipated." Pailey Vitale (12) said.

Phillips, Pollock, and Spaniel crushed it on their presentation earning the highest score possible.

WHAT IT TAKES to work WITH WOOD

Up to four years in the carpentry program set students up to complete their culminating senior project. The project involved designing what they wanted to build, drawing blueprints for it, getting the necessary lumber brought in to construct it, building it, and getting it home after completion. Past projects have included toy boxes for younger siblings, entertainment centers for their bedrooms, bed frames, kitchen cabinets, and even a small shed for a lawn mower and tools.

Rejuvenating restoration...

After sitting in an old, dank cellar for numerous years, Mr. Swanson's dining room chair gets some love. Mr. Swanson said, "The chair broke when my mother-in-law owned it. It collected mildew after sitting in the cellar. I cleaned it up, took it to Mr. Serena's carpentry class, and Nick Hughes and Devin Burkett did a great job on it." Carpentry teacher Mr. Chris Serena had Mr. Swanson for Algebra back in the early 2000s.

Vo-Tech students take requests from teachers

Saws whirring. Hammers pounding. Students laughing. Nick Hughes (12) and Devin Burkett (12) have worked side by side since freshman year at Vo-Tech. As they matured and grew, so did their carpentry projects. Respected librarian, Mr. John Swanson, asked Mr. Chris Serena, the carpentry teacher, to have students repair and fix up a hoosier cabinet that belonged to his wife's family for over 60 years.

Hughes said, "The hutch is older than dirt. The hardest part was taking the four layers of paint off."

"I can not wait to see the final outcome of this hutch, with all of the fixing-up that needs to be done," Burkett said.

Regarding other teachers' projects that have landed in their shop, Hughes and Burkett said, "We did a dining room table, referred to as a custom-built table, lanterns for a wedding, which was fun because we got to burn them, a wall hutch with a wine rack, a cornhole set, and a wooden side table."

In the auto mechanics shop, Deashaun Rhine (12), David Winning (11), and Dalton Pflum (11) have worked on vehicles from some of their teachers at NWCTC, including a hole in the exhaust and a blown engine on a 2007 Ford F-150.

Sanded down...

While sanding the many, many old layers of paint, Nick Hughes (12) and Devin Burkett (12) finally break through to the original wood. Hughes said, "My father and my grandfather motivated me to get into carpentry, and I really enjoy it." As a carpenter, Hughes indicated that in order to complete his required 1440 hours, he would need his handy hammer at all times.

The Fibonacci Sequence

Where ART Meets MATH

Mrs. Schaeffer and Mrs. Lynch dissect Fibonacci Sequence

Story: R. Frye (11)

The Fibonacci Sequence: $1+1=2$. $1+2=3$. $2+3=5$... Simply add the last two numbers listed in the series. Mrs. Schaeffer's Calculus II classes got the unique opportunity to not only learn about the Fibonacci Sequence through math, but also through its incredible connection to art, where Mrs. Lynch took over.

"Mrs. Schaeffer did a review of the sequence and the numbers behind it, whereas I came in and gave the artistic perspective with a focus on the Golden Rectangle and the spiral and how they used it in art and architecture," Mrs. Lynch said.

On Thursday, January 20, Lynch and Schaeffer held a working luncheon for the Calc II students. The menu included assorted sandwiches and chips, a drink, and bowls of candy for extra brain power.

"I'd like to think that it was successful," Lynch said, "I hope they walked away with a new perspective of the Fibonacci Sequence and that it was not just limited to the math room."

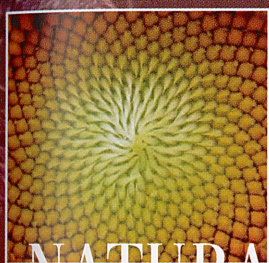

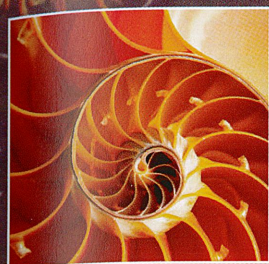

"I liked drawing the rectangles. It is kind of cool how Mrs. Lynch had a different take on it," Lindsey Zera (12) said.

Found not only in the classroom, but also in things like flower petals and cacti in nature, Ann Zezyus (12) said, "The sequence plays a big role in different aspects of our everyday lives."

"The main goal was to present a different perspective of the Fibonacci Sequence to the students in order to reinforce the concept, broaden their knowledge of the subject, and give them an opportunity to explore the idea in a unique way," Lynch said.

NATURAL Occurrences

Sequence of events...

In Mrs. Lynch's room on January 20, Calculus BC students partook in a workshop that coupled math and art. Calc teacher Mrs. Schaeffer said, "We tried to give the students an appreciation for how calculus is used in other disciplines." The event concluded with an art opportunity for all.

Fantastic Fibonacci...

After the Fibonacci presentation, Owen Zimmerman (12) shows off his artwork that features a profile of Zach Jordan's (12) head using the concepts learned in the lesson. Zimmerman said, "I think it looks just like him. It turned out really good." Zimmerman admitted that Jordan did not have the same sentiments.

WHAT IS IT?

Invented by the Italian Leonardo Pisano Bigollo (1180-1250), the sequence presents a series of numerals. Each number becomes the sum of the two previous numbers. (1+1=2, 1+2=3, 2+3=5...)

When you take those numbers and apply them to side lengths of a square, each one grows larger and larger, creating a spiral of squares. The name "Fibonacci" came from Bigollo's nickname "Fibonacci."

YOUR turn...

The Fibonacci Sequence displays numerical composition beauty and appears in many famous pieces of artwork—Mona Lisa, Girl with the Pearl Earring, and The Stream. After the presentation, students had to create their own piece that exhibited the Fibonacci Sequence.

YEARS AGO

All the way...

While sports enthusiasts predicted a rebuilding season for the boys, they rallied against team after team to make the postseason. Starting in mid-August in the Chapel at St. Francis, under the coaching of legend Dick Dilts, the football team found itself undefeated in the WPIAL playoffs against the Penn Hills Indians. Kicker Joe Stone sent the ball through the uprights for a 9-6 victory, lifting the team to its first WPIAL Championship game.

The final leg of the challenge, the team came face to face with Thomas-Jefferson High School at the University of Pittsburgh's stadium. In a hard-played defensive battle, the boys conquered TJHS with a score of 16-8, thus earning the school's first WPIAL Championship.

Back bender...

As one of her best senior picture shots, Megan Hastings (12) practices her entry into the water off the bar. Hastings said, "You have to get an even amount of height and distance when you enter the water. It's really important, especially for the backstroke so that you don't hit your back off the water." In addition to swimming the backstroke, Hastings also enjoyed the freestyle and relay events.

At the Hampton Talbot field, Brennan Moore (10) does everything he can to stretch out another inch in the long jump. Moore said, "In the long jump, you have to take your mind off the jump and concentrate more on instincts and the lines on the track. With enough practice, it should become second nature." In addition to long jump, Moore competed in the 100, 200, and 400X1 relay.

Out for blood...

Showing his scars from the Connellsville Duals Tournament, Clayton Cramer (10) looks up into the stands for his family. Cramer said, "The match beforehand, I got hit in the nose, and it started bleeding. A lot. They plugged it for me. Then, during this match, it started bleeding again. I did my best to not let it affect my focus and determination to win." Cramer ended up pinning Trent Huffman from the Falcons in the first period.

Miller got the opportunity to play offense for two games this year, something she had never done.

Step up to keep it out...

During the junior varsity game, Carli Luciano (12) dons a pinny and volunteers to play goalie. Luciano said, "I played goalie in youth soccer, so I am always willing to step back into the goal position to help out. But, I am happy to let Maxine Crosby (11) take on the varsity goalie duties." Luciano enjoyed the bus rides to away games for the bonding and relaxing time the team had.

After Devan Sonafelt (11) wins the ball from Morgan Walters (12) of Franklin Regional, she looks to start the attack up the field to find an open teammate. Sonafelt said, "When it comes to playing aggressively, you have to do what you've got to do." Sonafelt hoped to continue playing soccer in college.

Forward progress...

As Maddie Bachar (11) chases down the loose ball, she sees an opportunity to pass to an open teammate. "I absolutely love playing forward. When we play a highly intense game, I do a lot of running at my position," Bachar said. She noted that the first half of the home Franklin Regional game produced the most intensity and served as a season highlight for Bachar.

STING LEGACY

Mr. Shawn Kuhn's legacy felt by members of the girls' soccer team

Story: M. Knapp (11)

The girls' soccer team's season produced a much more sentimental feeling than most. On September 9, 2021, the school held a service to rename the field in Mr. Shawn Kuhn's honor.

"The memorial affected me personally because I have known Shawn since I was four years old. My family and I have always been close with the Kuhns," Emerson Johngarlo (12) said.

Kuhn played a big role in getting things done for the soccer team.

"He was a major part of the reason we have the amazing turf field we play on today. He built the concession stand for us, and he was always there for anything that needed done or fixing no matter what it was," Riley Koziatek (11) said.

"It means so much to me that the field was dedicated in honor of him because he and the Kuhns deserve it so much. Every practice and game mean more to me because I am playing on this field." Johngarlo (12) said.

Sign of a legend...

Unveiled on September 9, 2021, the scoreboard and field now sports the name of the soccer teams' supporter, Shawn Kuhn. Kuhn passed away unexpectedly in February, and the school community chose to dedicate the field in his memory.

"I played when I was six. I didn't like it. What I remember most from playing is crying in the middle of the field."

Against Woodland Hills, Stephanie Sikora (2013 grad) received unbelievable aggression from the goalie. "I'm pretty sure she was psycho," Sikora said.

Bee aggressive...

At the newly named Shawn Kuhn Field, Bella Devito (11) puts KT tape on Devan Sonafelt's (11) thigh. Devito said, "Devan had pulled a muscle, and to make sure that it doesn't get worse, you have to address it." Devito missed most of the season as well because of an ankle injury she got practicing.

Immediately after their introductions at the match versus Freeport, Maddox Anderson (11) flies in for a grand welcome. Anderson said, "I thought that it would be fun to lighten up the mood inside the huddle by soaring in." The team met arm-in-arm before every match to prep for the game.

At the away game against the Freeport Yellowjackets, Nathaniel Coleman (11) steals the ball from Lukas Troutman (12). Coleman said, "As far as aggression goes, Freeport is one of the easier teams that we play. I would say that Hampton and Mars were the most aggressive teams we confronted this year." Coleman played center-midfield for the home team and scored eight goals throughout the season and second round of playoffs.

At the home match against Franklin Regional, Linzey Miller (12) throws the ball in to one of her teammates. Miller said, "As outside back, my job is to make sure that I put the ball in a place that will get us a quick goal."

To win possession of the ball, Cannon Hayes (10) attempts to steal the ball back from Angelo Porco (10) for the team. "Shortly after the play, I brought the ball to the corner and put it across the net to Brenden Lott (10), who put the ball in the net for a goal," Hayes said. He played soccer for 11 years and served as a striker on both varsity and JV.

At the match against Freeport, Campbell Curry (12) leaps high to block a warm up goal shot. Curry said, "I had to fill in for the JV goalie since he got hurt. It was a bit weird playing for the junior varsity team." He hadn't played in the goalie position since the age of ten.

Goalie scores game-winning goal

As the goalkeeper of the team, Maddox Anderson's (11) chief concern required him to keep the ball out of his team's net. He frequently missed out on sharing the glory the offense received when they scored for the squad. However, in a spectacle of skill and power, Anderson scored a goal while playing his position from the center of the field against Mars.

"My first varsity goal was a game winner. A goal is a goal, but this one was special to me. I was so surprised because I didn't even know I scored, but seeing everyone run towards me in celebration was surreal," Anderson said.

The rest of the group shared in the excitement for their teammate's stunning accomplishment. Zach Jordan (12) recalled the feeling of astonishment everyone felt when the ball rolled into the other team's goal.

"It was the game winning goal, so it was very exciting. We were hyped to see our goalie score, and it gave us a renewed sense of urgency," Jordan said.

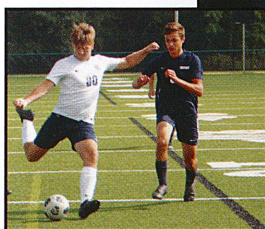

No amount of goals scored by a striker or midfielder can compete with a once-in-a-lifetime goal from the goalkeeper. Anderson nearly scored again, but settled for an assist on a redirection by Jordan at the rematch of the Mars game.

Possession is key...

During the first game of the season, Cannon Hayes (10) challenges Freeport to get possession of the ball. Hayes said, "It was a great year with a great group of guys. I hope to come back next year to play with the returning players." The team tied the wins record of 16 wins in a season and broke the previous scoring record of 87 goals with 89 goals.

Cool kicking control

When kicking a long ball, the goal of the kicker involves leading your intended target to give them a good opportunity to take the ball to the goal. If the kicker locates it perfectly for his/her teammate, the forward who receives it should have a great shot at an easy goal.

"I play forward, so normally, I don't do too many long kicks, but rather, I am on the receiving end of them. I think I scored maybe three goals off of long kicks this year."

Campbell Curry (12)

Jumping for joy, Maddox Anderson (11) celebrates his game-winning goal with his teammate. GOOD TIPS for even better swings

What tip did you learn that helped you with your golf swing the most?

Putting putting first...

Looking to score a birdie, Victoria Berberich (10) putts her ball from a distance of 20 feet. Berberich said, "Putting ranks as the number one phase of my game. It was something I worked on over the summer." Berberich felt she putted better with her favorite brand of golf ball, Titleist.

Super superstitious...

While warming up prior to teeing off, Kolin Shaffer (12) goes through his routine that he must complete before he hits the ball. "When I go to tee off, I step back from the ball, spin my club twice, take three practice swings and then hit the ball. I started this routine when I was really young," Shaffer said. He added that the last time he neglected his routine, he totally whiffed on the ball.

"Don't squeeze the club too tight because you're liable to lose control of the direction of your shot."

Enzo Morlacci (12)

"Don't hit the ball too hard. It causes you to move too much which will lead to losing control of your drive."

Josh Schrader (12)

"On my backswing, take it back slower and power through as I bring the club down."

Chipping in for the win...

As Campbell Curry (12) chips onto the green, he assesses whether his shot will get him near the hole. Curry said, "When I chip, on average, I can get it within 40 feet of the hole." Curry represented the team at the WPIAL Individual Semifinals.

NEED your KNEES

Part of the allure of golfing involves strategizing, the ability to read a green, and hitting the ball with the appropriate amount of power. Geno Gallippi (12) and Jason Buczak (10) found themselves in a situation where they helped each other on the putting green. They discussed how they work through the situation.

Gallippi said, "So I get behind the ball, and I get down to the height of the ball. I look and see which way the green is sloping. Then, I place my ball in whatever way that I am going to hit it."

Buczak said, "It's helpful to discuss a green's slope with a teammate and see it through his eyes. I really like the teamwork aspect of that and trusting others."

Buczak liked learning from Gallippi since this represented Gallippi's last year on the golf team.

KEEP IT STRAIGHT, and keep it real,

Shooting for a birdie...

While on the green, Briannon Miller (11) eyes up her putt. "I usually get the ball close to the hole on my second putt. It usually takes me two to three putts," Miller said. She achieved ten birdies out on the course.

Students face frustration when shots don't go their way

Golf required precision, concentration, and focus—staying focused on the drive, concentrating while chipping, and precision during putting all described the many facets of the sport. Consistency with every swing represented the keys to the game, but many considered golf the most inconsistent sport. Frustration set in when one swung at the ball, and it landed somewhere other than the intended target.

Nina Konieczny (10) said, "It is very easy to start getting frustrated at myself if I hit a bad shot or have a bad hole. As long as I continue to tell myself to just try and do better next shot or hole, I normally end up doing better."

In agreement with Konieczny, Laken Robshaw (11) said, "My biggest challenge is keeping a good mindset when I hit a bad ball. But, I like when the course is hard because the ball rolls better and it makes my long game easier."

Describe the best golf hole you've ever played.

"On hole #9, a par 5, at the Links at Spring Church, I reached the green in three shots, put it on the green six feet from the hole, and one-putted for a birdie."

Enzo Morlacci (12)

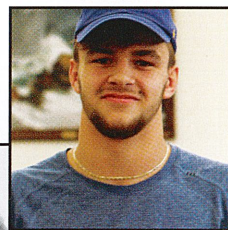

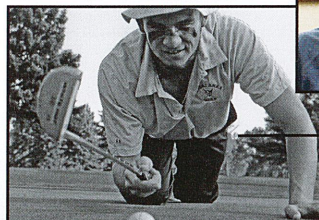

Deep concentration...

To sink the ball on hole #1 at the Willowbrook Country Club golf course in Apollo, PA, Brady Rametta (11) eyes up the shot. Rametta said, "I was lining up the putt to get the ball perfectly in the hole." He noted that hole #3 gave him the most trouble on the course.

On the third hole, Tim Collins gets up close as he reads the green. "I love being on the golf team with all my friends. The guys help me become a better player and also a better employee for my job," Collins said.

Rising stars look to replace exiting seniors

Story: K. Bombalski (12)

In all high school sports, seniors hold the position of providing leadership to the rest of the team. The loss of these crucial leaders has the possibility of damaging the future success of a team. At the end of the girls fall tennis season, the team lost two seniors. Now, the underclassmen needed to fill that void.

Grace Hill (11) had conflicting feelings on losing the current seniors. "I'm really excited to be able to help the team play our best next season, but I'm going to miss the current seniors. They were there when I first started, and it's going to be sad to say goodbye," Hill said.

Lindsay Bush (10) began playing tennis five years ago and felt ready to take charge on the team. "I am very excited to help lead the team next year. I think we have a lot of promising players, and I can't wait to see how next season turns out," Bush said.

The boys' team made that transition a couple of years ago. Ethan Beck's (11) confidence brimmed when he said, "We're definitely going to make the playoffs this coming spring."

SHOUT IT OUT...

cheer tryouts have begun

What does it take to make cheer squad?

Story: G. Kraus (11)

A cheerleader's main purpose involved hyping up the student section at football games, but how did they decide who got on varsity or who earned cheer captain? Tryouts for the cheerleaders spanned a four-day process that consisted of learning a dance, two cheers, and a chant. They then performed in front of a panel of judges to determine whether they made the varsity squad, junior varsity, or missed the cut altogether.

Emily Sarti (9) faced some unexpected challenges when it came to trying out.

Sarti said, "The process can be really tiring, but it really just depends on the person. The toughest part for me was getting up early in order to get to tryouts on time."

Varsity Captain Olivia Crony (12) had a different experience trying out for cheer.

Crony said, "There is much more pressure when trying out for captain. I had to try out all on my own as compared to having other girls with me. I also had to come up with my own cheer to perform in front of judges. That was really stressful."

"I just loved the overall experience, having a great team, and making memories. I'm going to miss the spotlight when I do back handsprings, corner to corner."

Nyasia Chambers (12)

"Cheering at football games and going to games was what I liked most about being a senior cheerleader. I'll definitely miss all the bonds I created with the team."

Ross had considerations about trying out for a cheer squad in college, with Duquesne and Pitt as her top two choices for her future academic endeavors.

After a play does not go the Cavalier way, Natalie Bollinger (12) gives a look of disdain at the referees. "Cheering can be exhausting at times, but overall, it's a very fun sport with amazing experiences. Still, sometimes the refs are blind," Bollinger said. Adorned in neon accessories, seniors Nyasia Chambers, Karissa Will, Chloe Arbaugh, and Natalie Bollinger cheer on their fellow teammates as they tumble across the track. Bollinger said, "Even though most of the squad does back handsprings and back tucks, I stick to forward rolls." The girls perform their tumbles usually during timeouts.

After a successful scoring drive, Cody Dykes (12) kicks off to the Franklin Regional Panthers. "Kicking for the team is a great experience because not only do I get to help out a team, but if I do my job right, all of the fans cheering makes it really fun," Dykes said. Dykes started kicking his freshman year and started playing soccer at the age of three.

Student-athlete...

While watching the offense make a great play, Brandon Lawhorn Moore (12) displays a look of amazement at what he just saw. Lawhorn Moore said, "As much as I love football, I know that education is more important than football because that education will always be there for you." Lawhorn Moore received offers to continue playing football from ten schools including the University of Toledo and Old Dominion University.

5-0 start propels team to new heights

The football team had an amazing run this season. With their initial record of 5-0, the team hit an all time high.

"It felt great to go 5-0 and do something that hasn't been done in a long time. The undefeated start really showed us what we were capable of doing and the team we had this year," Brayden Dunmire (12) said.

The wins helped to show the team how commitment and effort could pay off. It also helped them develop confidence and a higher level of camaraderie. The different and well thought-out strategies each week enabled them to come out on top.

"Our strategy was really only to hit harder than any other team, and we did that every week; it didn't matter who it was," Brandon Lawhorn Moore (12) said. Everyone could feel the excitement surrounding the team.

Calvin Heinle said, "Our team has been playing together since we were 10. I think it was finally our time. We've been working for a while."

The boys' season opening of 5-0 hasn't happened

Runners credit drills for broken records/wins

Prodigy Eliza Miller (10) brought home spectacular wins at three out of her first four meets. Apart from that, she also broke two records in that same time frame.

"The first record I broke this season was at Altoona, and the other was at sectionals," Miller said. "These wins don't always come easy though."

However, those wins and broken records resulted from regimented practices, all structured to improve times and endurance. Justin Tucker (10) explained some of the drills that the team completed.

"One regular workout that we do is mile repeats. This is where we run a mile at a certain time, get a small break, and then do the next mile at a certain time," Tucker said. "I

Students discuss difficulties of lost year

All spring sports felt the worst of the brunt of the shutdown in 2020 due to COVID. Baseball and softball salvaged their competitive seasons with summer leagues. Unfortunately, the track and field teams did not get to enjoy a similar luxury.

After a fun seventh grade season, Carly Shupe (10) felt upset over losing her eighth grade season.

Shupe said, "It set me back a little, missing the eighth grade year. I had to relearn some techniques, and javelin was totally new to me. I did pretty okay, and overall, I was just glad to be back out there again."

Ethan Woodhall (12)

knew that missing a year and having a new throwing coach would add to the difficulty.

Woodhall said, "I missed out on a year of improvement. Learning from a new coach helped us to learn from each other."

Michael McGuire (11) endured a double disappointment when he learned of a stress fracture in his shin in February.

McGuire said, "I was ready for the freshman season but lost it due to COVID. After cross country last year, I had pain in my leg, but I ran on it anyway. So, I lost my sophomore season, too. I am looking forward to the indoor and outdoor season this year."

Half the battle with discus involved technique (with the other half represented by strength). CJ Hepler (12) started his discus and throwing career in seventh grade. Hepler appreciated all the Chambers said, "I was practicing and thinking to myself about how the jump felt and what I did right and what I did wrong." Coach Brell encouraged Chambers to give high jump a shot in ninth grade, and she has loved it ever since.

I had a coach tell me to never think about anything other than what's going on at the moment." The matches against Franklin Regional and Plum stuck out in Ledbetter's mind as the most intense ones.

Shanfs, but no shanfs...

While waiting for the serve, Madeline Joyce (9) uses a look of determination to intimidate the server. Joyce said, "If the ball comes my way on the serve, my biggest fear is shanking it. Luckily, I don't do that very often." Joyce played primarily as setter on her club team, but tried out and earned the libero position since her older sister Sydney Joyce (11) played as the setter on the varsity squad.

Audience of one...

While listening to the National Anthem, Laci Safranyos (11) prepares her mind and body for the game ahead. Safranyos said, "I look at the same star on the flag every time; top right, third in the diagonal. Then, at the end of the Anthem, I tap my fingers over my heart." During her last play off game, Safranyos wrote AO1 on her wrist tape for Audience of One and played the best game of her life against the hardest hitter she'd ever seen.

Playing in front of Plum Mustang crowd proves challenging

Student section yelling. Crowd cheering. Volleyball pounding. The match against Plum seemed to create a memorable uproar within the Plum student section.

"The student section was made up of some of their boy's volleyball team members which means they knew what they were talking about," Alyssa Weigand (11) said.

The Plum student section involved themselves in verbally attacking the girls on the team.

"They weren't personally attacking me," Madeline Joyce (9) said, "but just hearing them call out my teammates affected how I was playing just a little bit."

While the student section continued to get in the girls' heads, someone in the Kiski crowd did something about it. "One of the moms recorded the student section and sent it to the athletic director, who then called the police so they could contain this wildly aggressive group of students," Weigand said.

Even though the game ended in a loss, the team played as hard as they could, given the circumstances.

Starting stimulus...

During the pregame introductions, the team raises their arms to form a tunnel as Macey Hepler (12) hears her name called and runs through. "We clap for each person and offer random words of encouragement to hype each other up for the match," Hepler said. Even though Hepler excelled as a thrower in track and field, she hoped to play intramural volleyball in college.

Coach coaching...

In order to gather the troops at a critical juncture in the match, Alyssa Weigand (11) listens intently to Coach Jodie McCartney. Weigand said, "Coach usually hypes us up and critiques our play to that point. She definitely helps to renew our energy when we get back on the court." Weigand remarked how it seemed more players missed time this year versus last year due to COVID-19 contact.

Emotional energy...

After a hard-fought point, the team gathers to celebrate. Emma Beck (12) said, "When we win a point, we celebrate and get focused for the upcoming play. We try to keep the energy up for the rest of the match." Beck remembered the intensity from a match her freshman year against Franklin Regional and the excitement of each point.

Martin said, "It felt amazing to be able to go out and wrestle, represent our school again this year, and get the pin on Senior Night." At the start of the second period, Evan Artman's (10) opponent starts in the down position. "It was a struggle keeping him from earning an escape point. Luckily, it is only worth one point," Artman said. He sported a 13-10 record with seven pins.

Bloody win...

During a previous match, Clayton Cramer (10) sustained a hit to the nose that caused it to bleed. Cramer said, "It was everywhere and wouldn't stop. I didn't want to stop the match, so I pinned the kid in the first period." Cramer felt he had a good season, especially since he had 10 pins.

State qualifiers tell perspectives on Finals in Hershey, PA

Story: R. Frye (11)

"I think we have a good shot, I think all three should medal," Mr. Heater (fac) said. The day after three of his wrestlers, Stone Joseph (12), Enzo Morlacci (12), and Isabella DeVito (11), qualified for states, Heater figured they would all come out with a clean finish. "Stone and Enzo are both seniors who just qualified for the first time. With that being said, it just goes to show you how difficult it is to get to states," Heater said.

"I was just taking each match one at a time and trying to enjoy the moment because I knew that one of these matches would be the last time I was going to wrestle in those rounds during my high school career," Joseph said.

One of these matches qualified Joseph for states, and "when I got the pin in the blood round, I was very excited to secure my spot."

"I was excited and feeling confident in the qualifying matches, and when I realized I made it to states, I was beyond happy and proud of myself that I made it that far," DeVito said.

In all of the stress, these matmen did have moments that stuck out. For DeVito, "My second match was very exciting and close in points. It was tied 3-3 going into the third period."

Joseph smiled when he said, "I launched kids through the air, which is always exciting!"

"Obviously we went in blind, and I am very excited about how things turned out. I am very proud of my team," Coach Heater said.

Hockey players realize importance of learning from veterans/newcomers

Ice chips fly as skaters skid to a stop after the buzzer blares, signaling the end of their warm-up time. Having called up four players from the junior varsity team, the players' confidence in themselves to perform well brimmed.

Varsity Captain Aiden Sites (12) appreciated the opportunity to learn from the new varsity players.

"The incoming freshman helped a lot because they brought a ton of skill and hockey experience for us to work with," Sites said.

"It is really important to build a relationship with the new players on varsity off the ice in order to understand how they view the game and benefit us on the ice," Nick Miles (11) said. Miles had played hockey for eight years and played for multiple competitive teams outside of Kiski.

Jacob Kraus (9) learned a few valuable lessons during his time playing with the varsity team.

Kraus said, "I've been playing hockey since I was seven, and as I progressed to AAA, it became stressful for me. After I started playing varsity, I really began to enjoy playing hockey again because of how supportive the upperclassmen were."

Break fast...

While tracking down the loose puck, center Aidan Bardine (11) looks to corral it down and create a scoring chance. Bardine said, "When I lead a breakout opportunity, I try to find the open man so that we can get a shot on goal." Bardine fondly recalled that he netted the first goal of the year for the team in the first game of the year against Norwin.

FACE the fight

Physicality and hockey went hand in hand. Anyone who signed up for the sport understood this. Members of the hockey team never shied away from a good brush-up, which resulted in some chippiness throughout the season.

Defensive fracas...

During the Greensburg Salem game, Matt Clinger (12) gets in only his second fight in a high school hockey game in his career. Clinger said, "I was sticking up for a cheap hit that was put on Tanner [Kowalkowski] (11)." Clinger received a five-minute major penalty and a game misconduct for his feat.

Let me at 'em...

After Preston Henry (12) of Greensburg Salem cross-checked Aidan Bardine (12), Geno Gallippi (12) rushes in to support his teammate in the scuffle. Gallippi said, "I tried to send a message to Henry, but once the ref got a hold of me, there wasn't much I could do." Gallippi played the winger position and indicated that he created a lot of hockey memories with the boys.

Digging for the goal...

In the corner, Kyle Guido (11) tries to gain control of the puck. Guido said, "There is no technique for getting a puck out of the corner. You just have to want it more." Guido's 14 goals gave him the second most on the team behind Ethan George's (11) 21 goals.

Defenseman Aiden Sites (12)

Control of the puck...

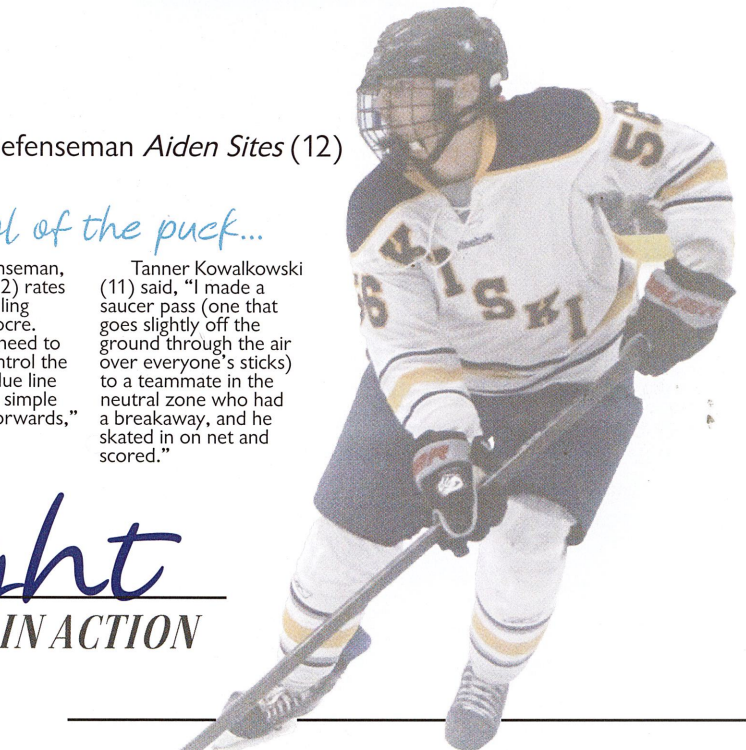

As a defenseman, Aiden Sites (12) rates his puck-handling skills as mediocre. "Defensemen need to be able to control the puck to the blue line and make the simple plays to the forwards," Sites said.

Tanner Kowalkowski (11) said, "I made a saucer pass (one that goes slightly off the ground through the air over everyone's sticks) to a teammate in the neutral zone who had a breakaway, and he skated in on net and scored."

Crash the net...

As Nicholas Miles (11) zeroes in on the goal, he tries to get a clean shot. "At the center position, I try to get my teammates an opportunity to score. So, when I skate at the goal with the puck, I have to make a split-second decision to pass to a teammate or shoot it myself," Miles said. He started playing hockey at the age of five and has logged time with the Allegheny Badgers and the North Hills Vipers.

DIVE BACK IN

to a hopeful season

On your mark...

Exploding out of her start, Megan Hastings (12) leads off the 200-medley relay. "I like away meets because of all the energy on the bus," Hastings said. She most fondly remembered her performance at Counties.

Swimmers take victory lap to celebrate return to pool

The swim team dove into a season of new possibilities after a season of rough waters. Previous restrictions kept the athletes limited in how they could practice and compete during last year's schedule. The swimmers now rejoiced in the freedom to reach for their goals without fear.

"We are so happy to be back to normal," Megan Hastings (12) said.

Hastings, an avid swimmer since early elementary, excelled in 100-meter and relay swimming.

"Our progress this year has been overwhelmingly positive, and it's exciting to see the team succeed, despite the odds. I think getting back to competition is going to be special for everyone."

Angela Tucker (11) felt hopeful for the future of the program after 10 years of competing in the sport.

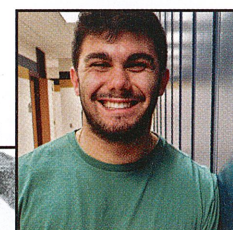

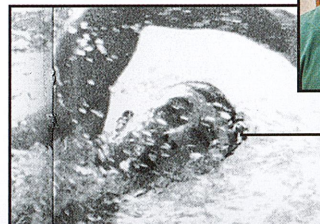

"Many swimmers got close to achieving WPIAL cut times and records this year. It gives us something to work towards in future seasons. Winning multiple meets was gratifying since last year, we only won one," Tucker said.

Captain Ken Holmes paces himself toward a victory in the 200-yard freestyle.

If we had a diving team, why would you have wanted to join?

CJ Hepler (12)

"I think that I would be good at it because I have a gymnastics background. I also want to stay flexible for track."

Flying into the future...

Up for a gasp of air, Cameran Thompson (12) gets a best time without even realizing. "I looked up at the clock and was surprised to see I got first in my heat and then realized that I had dropped six seconds. I was so happy and surprised and happy that I started crying," Thompson said. "When I'm at college next year, I'll miss the small moments with the team most."

BEFORE during, and AFTER

Hyped up...

Goofing off with his teammates before a home meet, Levi Hansen (11), as usual, takes center stage. "Before the meet, we just have fun to get hyped up, but once we get in the water, we get serious," Hansen said. He took second place at WPIALs in the 200 freestyle with a new school record.

Mindset matters...

To gain a good entrance, Ella McBryde (11) thinks about what her coach told her. "If I am swimming a sprint, I don't really think about anything, but if it's something long like the 500, I just think about what Coach Berb told me before I started," McBryde said. She most enjoyed swimming the 50 and 100 freestyles.

CAVS on three...

Hyped up to swim, the boys put their hands in to scream "Go CAVS" on the count of three. "Our favorite hype song this year was Love Sosa. We listened to it before every meet," Jacob Halter (11) said. The boys' team stood out as one of the most hyped up swim teams in the section.

ROUGH TIMES

on the hard wood

Committing fouls and getting fouled represent a significant role in the game of basketball. Players discussed a memorable "foul."

"My hand got stuck in an opponent's hair because she had really curly hair. I pulled on it to get my hand out, but the ref did not see it. It should have been a foul."

Heather Sieczkowski (12)

"I was pulling someone's jersey but didn't realize I was. Luckily, they didn't call a foul."

Lauren Cyphert (9)

"I was too excited thinking I made the shot that I didn't notice a girl had bent my wrist really far back. The girl got a foul called on her."

Ja'Miya Henderson (9)

"In my junior year, I full-on pushed a girl, and she fell to the ground hard. However, the ref did not call it."

Dejah Burnett (12)

"An opponent punched me in the eye and called me a not-so-nice word. She didn't even get a foul called on her."

Hanan said, "I ask my teammates what type of handshake they want to do ahead of time, but sometimes we have to figure it out on the fly." Hanan recalled the craziest one she did involved Karly Keller (12) and an air jump.

Hopin' for an open...

In her attempt to find an open lane, Zoe Holm (10) dribbles to find a teammate. Holm said, "I like cheering on my friends from the bench and truly being happy with what they accomplish." In her free time, Holm found her way to Seven Springs about 15 times each winter for snowboarding and skiing.

Keep it alive...

During the first section game against Hampton, Abbie Johns (10) makes a strong attempt to keep the ball inbound. "The atmosphere of playing basketball with my friends is what I enjoy most," Johns said. Even though she liked volleyball, she preferred the constant motion that went with basketball.

In her face...

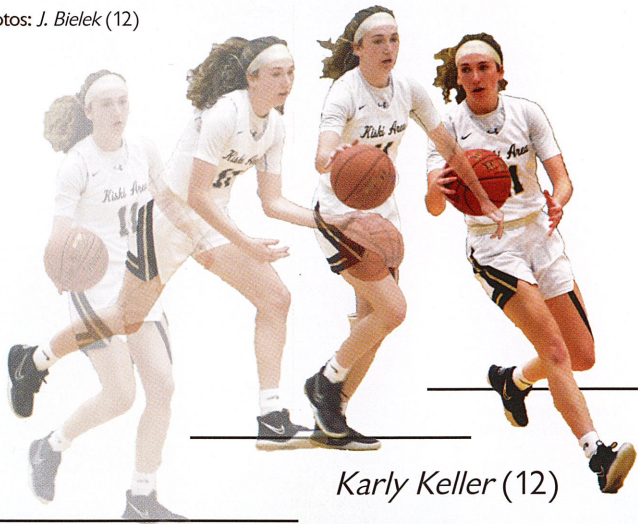

As Hampton's Claire Rodgers (11) attempts to find an open shooter, Rikiya Garcia-Broaden (9) tries to block the pass. Garcia-Broaden said, "I absolutely love playing basketball. I play it year round, in leagues, on open courts in the park, everywhere." She started her love for the game six years ago and hasn't found any other sport as enjoyable.

Lady hoopsters describe meaning of basketball

Story: A. Carion (11)

Swoosh! The modern concept of teammates became more referred to as family. In this case, the girls' basketball team established the idea that family did not always have to refer to blood.

Riley Hanan (12) said, "Basketball allows me to spend time with my teammates and helps me be a mentor to the underclassman." Riley has relished this role for the last six years.

A fellow teammate, Lexi Colaanni (11) said, "Basketball has changed my life by creating relationships with teammates that are like family to me. Basketball allows me to have things in common with people and make new memories that will always live on in my heart."

To add to the family aspect of the team, Isabella Horcicak (9) said, "My favorite part about playing the game consists of working together with my teammates every day and building good relationships with the coaches and the players. Basketball has given me so many great relationships, and it keeps me going mentally and physically. I have no idea where I would be without basketball or the wonderful friends it has given me."

Great moments...

Isabella Horcicak (9) said, "I am sure I was telling Abbie [Johns] to 'Go to work. Go do your thing.'"

"In an AAU game, I pulled up about three feet from the top of the three-point arc and drained it. I'll admit, I didn't realize how far out I was when I launched it."

Team enjoys tripling of win total to spark playoff berth

After tough seasons the last few years, the basketball team found their groove and meshed well with their new coach Corey Smith who they punched a ticket into the WPIAL playoffs. This represented the first trip for the seniors in their four years.

"It felt great to make the playoffs this year with our new coaches. We won 15 games and only won five last year, so making it to the playoffs was a big accomplishment for the team," senior Brayden Dunmire said. The boys' hard work and determination really paid off for them. They had many tactics and strategies to make it so far.

"I think we prepared really well, and we had a coach who showed us what we needed to do to get the job done," senior Dylan Hutcherson said. The coaches worked the boys hard, but it truly paid off in the long run. The bond that the team made will definitely last forever.

The senior boys felt compelled to share words of advice to the underclassmen joining the basketball team in the future.

"Just play together, and have fun; the winning will come with that," Joe Lukas (12).

"Stay locked in, and a scholarship may come your way," Hutcherson said.

"Stay confident in your team and yourself, and keep your grades up," Dunmire said.

Even though the team bowed out in the first round of the playoffs, the building blocks put in place helped the team sustain a successful run.

Overabundance of open...

Against McKeesport, LeBryn Smith (12) grabs the rebound and goes right back up with it for a layup. "My teammates did a great job of boxing out so that I could get the easy layup attempt," Smith said. Having played basketball since the age of four, Smith hoped to play either baseball or football in college.

The Free Throw

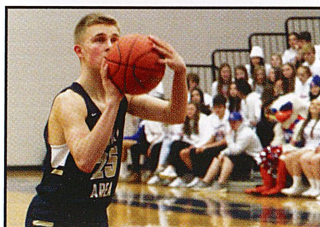

The gym gets silent (in a home game) or really raucous (on the road) as a player attempts free throws. Some players historically have had trouble with the uncontested shot while others thrive at the "charity stripe."

Shooting his shot...

As John Wolfe (11) warms up before the game against Armstrong, he practices his foul shots. Wolfe said, "I've been playing basketball for five years, and I love it. Practicing free throws is necessary because you never know when it's your turn to make a crucial shot." Wolfe's pregame ritual included washing his hands before every game to ensure their dryness.

Hot shot...

After getting fouled, Jason Flemm (10) looks to improve upon his free throw percentage. Flemm said, "When I am on the free throw line, I don't think, I just do what I do." Flemm suffered a season-ending torn ACL when he simply made a step, and his knee snapped.

Flying higher...

During a scoring opportunity, Isaiah Gonzalez (10) gets free to shoot a layup. Gonzalez said, "After getting a lot of quality minutes with the varsity team last year, I have a much better understanding of playing at the high school level this year." Gonzalez appreciated the huge improvement on a team level.

The Layup

The Block: Brayden Dunmire (12) takes pride in his defensive skills. "When I can block a shot, it's a game changer. It gets the adrenaline going and can get the crowd pumped up," Dunmire said.

The Layup: James Pearson (12) has shown his proclivity at making layups. In modeling Pearson, Connor Jordan (9) said, "I practice shooting the ball off the class from the closest free throw box in the paint. I try to find the perfect angle for my layups."

The Block

All for paps...

Running past Cadin Olsen, the number one quarterback in the state from Armstrong, Joe Lukas goes for a layup. "I keep choosing the jersey number 12 because that was the number I wore the year my Pap died," Lukas (12) said. Lukas played basketball since first grade and planned on attending college for Accounting and Pre Law.

PNC PARK PICS

7-7 versus Seneca Valley

4/17/2021 - When you think back to the opportunity to play in a major league stadium, discuss the thoughts from that evening.

Looking to hit the gap...

As the pitch approaches, Owen Werkeiser's (12) eyes light up at a ball he thinks he can put a charge into. Werkeiser said, "When I'm batting, I'm very relaxed, and I am just happy to be there and play." Werkeiser manned the centerfield position in a fashion similar to Andrew McCutchen's time with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Calling off a teammate...

Making sure no one gets in his way, Nathan Witt (10) calls off Wyatt Krogh (10) in order to make the catch. "My favorite part about it is the competition of the game when I'm on the field. I'm always very happy when playing the game," Witt said. While Witt did catch the pop up, the umpire had called the infield fly rule, which immediately resulted in an out.

Inside pitch...

As he steps back from the pitch, Jacob Bucci's (11) reflexes prevent him from getting hit. Bucci said, "When I am batting, I'm very focused. I try to stay calm and not think or stress too much." Bucci ended up hitting the ball to the fence, nearly achieving a home run.

Reflect...

During the National Anthem, the team shows their respect for their country. Mason Ross (12) said, "When we are standing on the line, that's really when it hits me that we're about to play. We have to flip the switch and get into game mode." Ross appreciated the ability to take a moment and show respect for the military.

Strategize...

Before a batter, Coach Mark Fairman goes over the strategy with Connor Flemm (11) and Jacob Smith (10). Flemm said, "When we have a talk with the coach during the game, we usually go over the play and what pitches would be the best to throw against a certain player." After the meeting, the game plan worked and Smith struck the batter out.

Unite...

After the 3-3 tie against Seneca Valley, the team huddles after the game. Dom DiNinno (12) said, "Gathering together pre- and post-game helps the team unite for a common goal—to bring home wins." Once the huddle broke, the team enjoyed the ride home from the hard fought game.

PITCHING WITH A

Pirate twist at PNC Park

Story: R. Frye (11)

Loosen up...

Prior to the first pitch, Nathan Witt (10) throws the ball to first baseman Jacob Bucci (10) during pregame. "It feels good to catch and throw the ball with my boys," Witt said. He enjoyed playing the game and spending team time with his friends.

Looking for the hook...

While looking for little trickery in his pitch, Jacob Smith (10) attempts to put a little something extra on the rotation of the ball. Smith said, "I had to step in and play some catcher when Connor Flemm (11) broke his leg." Smith experienced the uniqueness of playing both ends of the pitching and catching battery.

Baseball team enjoyed rare opportunity of major proportions

Devastating many. Changing lives. Flipping plans. COVID-19 altered the schedules of people, schools, and sports teams across the globe. As for the baseball team, their season started with a little twist. "Instead of going to Florida, we went to PNC Park to play a game this season. I personally think that PNC was a better deal than Florida because it is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to play at the same stadium that a major league baseball team plays," Owen Werkeiser (12) said. For Nathan Witt (9), he would have preferred to have played where most people would not.

Witt said, "I would have loved to play in Florida because it is further away. I feel that the further away we play, the closer our team gets."

As for LeBryn Smith (11), he had a different perspective on things. "The most interesting part of the PNC Park visit was the fact that we could not warm up on the grass. We had to warm up on the warning track. However, the best part of the season was getting to play on the PNC Park field."

Even though COVID-19 changed some schedules around, the baseball team worked around the minor inconveniences that enabled them to play at the home of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I played for one year when I was five years old. What I remember most is hitting the ball off the tee and running to first base. That's all I remember."

Two for Tuesday...

In the game against Gateway, Jacob Bucci (10) smacks a ball that bounces over the right field fence for a ground rule double. Bucci said, "As a first baseman, I try to be a power hitter. Last season, I believe I hit seven home runs." Bucci named making the playoffs his top goal for the team for the upcoming season.

Players discuss the feelings they get from playing the game

The Lady Cavs softball team fought through a difficult 2021 season, finishing with a well-fared 5-10 record.

Senior outfielder Madison Leith (12) has played softball since she entered sixth grade, so she knew how to remain strong despite the challenges presented during their various games.

"When approaching a game, my nerves definitely play a role in my performance. If I'm nervous, I tend to play worse. However, I know I have plenty of opportunities to make it up to my teammates," Leith said.

The team had to hold their bravado to ensure emotions did not interfere with their gameplay.

"I'm a catcher through-and-through, I have been playing softball for 10 years, and my feelings still play a big factor in my overall performance. I try not to think about my nerves and put my all into the game," Laci Safranyos (11) said.

The resilient Lady Cavs played their games wholeheartedly. They did their best not to let their emotions prohibit them from giving the game their all.

Bunting in beast mode...

During her at-bat, Mackenzie Favero (11) attempts to lay down a bunt. "Depending on the defense, I try to bunt the ball where the other team isn't," Favero said. She worked hard on bunting during the off-season to improve her chances to get on base.

"I like facing competition. There is no better feeling than playing a hard fought game and winning, especially if it's Franklin Regional."

Rebuilt team bonds over successful season

Competing on any sports teams at the school represented more than just playing the game. The bowling team used their sport to build friendships, leadership skills, and even personal traits. Girls' team captain Savannah Renwick (11) credited bowling for helping to further develop her personality.

"My experience with bowling has been life-changing, given me some lessons that I carry with me, and has been extremely rewarding," Renwick said.

Renwick, the only returning member of the girls' team, applied her experiences in hopes of self-betterment. She added that even after her three consecutive years of bowling, improvement is imperative, "I made it to States and Regionals last year. It was very rewarding but also showed me that I needed more practice. This year, I'm determined to do well and be able to do better than I did last year."

The girls' team bowled in the Westmoreland County Coaches' Association bowling Tournament and demonstrated phenomenal performance. Overall, the girls credited their work to the dedication and support from their coaches and fellow bowlers.

LUCKY duck

The lucky duck named Thirteen sat at the table with the girls' bowling team at every match. If Thirteen wasn't on the table, one of the girls always noticed. The team even named him after a running joke that Zeller's lucky number was 13.

"I originally got Thirteen from my very first states tournament. I decided that Thirteen was my lucky duck for bowling because I would always do really well in tournaments that I brought Thirteen to," Zeller said.

Focus...

While working on her throw, Peyton Martin (10) focuses on the lane. "The most stressful thing about bowling is when the scores are really close, and the winner of the game is the one who wins the overall match," Martin said. The thing which inspired Martin to improve most came from the constant support from their coaches and teammates.

Determination...

Focusing on his mark, Nickson McDermott (11) tries to block out distractions. "I have been bowling for seven years, and my highest game this year was 251," McDermott said. McDermott's favorite game took place when the boys' team managed to win a game with only four players compared to the other team which had five players.

Anticipation...

While watching the bowling ball roll down the lane, Alyssa Leya (9) anticipates the pins that should fall down. "My favorite game was the one when we beat Deer Lakes because it was interesting and close but also very fun," Leya said. She started bowling four years ago after her pap prompted her interest in bowling.

Hoping for a strike, Nick Debich (9) skillfully throws his ball down the lane. "My favorite part about bowling is the environment and that all the people are so nice and kind," Debich said. He started bowling in a little league at the age of five, but he bowled in his first high school league this year.

Reflection by Savannah Renwick (11)

When throwing a bowling ball, I first stand and make sure my feet are on the correct dot. I hold my ball off to my right, take a deep breath, and line up the ball with the correct arrow. As I push the ball out, I take my first step. The ball goes back as I take my second step and forward on the third step. I release it on my fourth. Upon that release, I stay in the pose as the ball heads towards the pins. I then watch the ball to make sure it hits the mark.

"First, you have to figure out what caused your first game to fail. Then, you have to make adjustments to correct it. Sometimes, it might take until the third game to get it all right."

Nickson McDermott (11)

"It's hard to keep a bad first game out of your head. Basically, I just try to think of my second game as my new first game. That's actually happened to me a few times this season. You can't let a bad first game get the best of you."

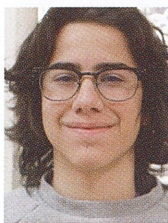

Nick Debich (9)

"I rebound from a bad first game by keeping my mindset good. I have fun with my team and try and stay positive. That way, one bad game doesn't turn into three."

While he waits for the release of the clay pigeon, Evan Ridenour (9) looks to score on his shot. Ridenour said, "Trap shooting is fun, and even though I feel I could've done better, I have definitely improved from last spring to the fall season." Ridenour and Ty Conner (9) competed in an individual tournament in Erie over the summer and Ridenour scored his first 25/25.

Shooting for states...

As a rookie shooter on the trap shooting team, Pailey Vitale (12) gets used to the feel of the .12 gauge her father got her at the start of the spring season. "I feel I improved a lot from last spring to this fall. I find this to be a fun sport, and I am looking forward to the upcoming spring season," Vitale said. Vitale and 11 others went to Elysburg over the summer and competed at the state tournament. Vitale finished second in the junior varsity girls' division.

Wise eyes...

In his attempt to hit the target, Caleb Custer (11) takes aim with his Mossberg pump action shotgun. "I just need to focus on what I am doing and what is in front of me," Custer said. He got his hunting license in order to participate on the trap shooting team and preferred the sport of target shooting over hunting.

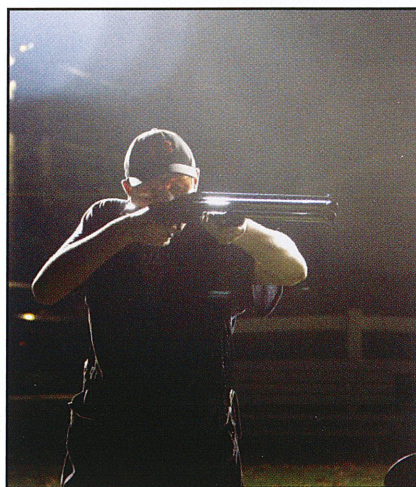

HOW do you SEE IT?

Different view...

While taking in some extra practice at night, Ryan Ridenour (11) focuses on shooting as many birds as possible. Ridenour said, "Shooting the birds (clay pigeons) at night is different from shooting during the day. The lights illuminate them for a different look." Ridenour started trap shooting four years ago, before the school team formed.

Point of View...

During a break at practice, Coach Jeff Cortileso instructs Ryan Ridenour (11) with some valuable pointers. "I shot with Jeff at the Vandergrift Gun Club. He wanted to start a team and got enough interested students that we had to move our home gun club to the West Penn Gun Club," Ridenour said. The larger size of the West Penn Sportsmen's Club enabled the team to assemble everyone on Tuesday evenings for their competitions.

SHOOTING FOR A fine finish in new sport

One and done...

After having not shot a gun in years, Lucas Kowalczyk (11) uses his dad's 12 gauge to compete on the trap shooting team. Kowalczyk said, "I participated during the spring season, but I wasn't very good at it. I improved some, but I didn't stay with it for the fall season." Kowalczyk used the extra time from not doing trap shooting to focus on his classes.

In her sights...

Shooting alongside Max Mottura (8) and Logan Bigley (8), Taygen Hill (10) gets ready to shoot at the clay pigeon when it gets released. Hill said, "I focus on which way the bird comes out and how far in front of the bird I need to be." Starting with the team during the spring season, Hill recently recorded scores of 23/25 and 24/25. She paid attention to what she did differently to achieve those scores.

Members of new trap shooting team qualify for States in first year

As a new sport on the slate of activities, trap shooting attempted to carve out its niche in the school's landscape. Even with the newness of it, some team members displayed some impressive skills. During the spring season, the team successfully made it to the state competition held in Elysburg, Pennsylvania.

Laszlo Dickey (12) recalled his trip to States. "I had tons of fun; it was a blast. Even though I didn't actually win, the trip alone was a win in my eyes. I'm proud to say that we made it that far," Dickey said.

However, his teammate Pailey Vitale (12) placed second in the Junior Varsity Girls' Division. "The win felt really rewarding because all of my practicing had paid off, and the team was really supportive, so that was awesome," Vitale said. She represented the trap shooting team as the only female to compete, as well as the only team member to win a medal that day.

"During this fall's season, I shot a 45/50, which means during a round of 50 day pigeons, I was able to hit 45 of them. I was in the zone that day."

Talent show talents...

For the 9-12 division of the 2016 Key Club Talent Show, Olivia Shirley (10) and Katie Lewis (12) perfect their synchronization while in a hinge. "Katie and I have danced together for nine years. For the past three years, we were each other's duet partners," Shirley said. In the middle of their performance, the music stopped. Still, the girls did not miss a beat.

Practice makes perfect...

Focused on both the music and Mr. Puchsky's directing, Maria Heath (10) plays the bass clarinet part in Abracadabra, written by Frank Ticheli. Heath said, "It's awesome starting every Day A with band because it's a great way to wake up, and it's a great environment to be in with everyone working so hard." She further said that you could sense a great presence of motivation in the air for every class.

In gym B on December 10, Kendall Kernan (11) donates her blood for the CLC-sponsored Blood Drive. CLC adviser Mrs. Poleski said, "We had one of the most successful Blood Drives in our history this year. With everything going on with COVID, it couldn't have come at a better time." Overall, the student body donated over 40 units of blood that all went to Vitalant, one of the oldest blood drives in the nation.

National champions...

Known as the Beast from the East, the marching band has earned some of the country's most prestigious awards over the years. Still, no award or competition surpassed the Bands of America Grand Nationals of 1994.

Armed with their "Come Rain or Shine" show, the band won the AA class for the first time ever. Additionally, the regiment made Finals and placed second to the Marion Catholic Marching band from Chicago Heights, IL by the slight margin of 0.15 points.

Incidentally, when the band won the 2021 BOA Mid-Atlantic Regional, they became the first and only corps in United States history to have won a Regional in each of five decades.

Frye said, "It doesn't take me nearly as long to write a story like it did before. I guess that's what lots of experience can do for you." Frye and ten other students will travel to Penn State Main on March 30 to compete for the state title in various categories.

REPORTING

"I'll be taking a newly found love for photography with me. Also, I've learned so many aspects about taking photographs like proper framing, cropping, lighting, and other techniques used when taking great action and emotion shots."

Jackson Bielek (12)

"A new appreciation for creative photos and photos with different perspectives. I used to only look at photos from one perspective. But, now I see the potential of framing one action with another, or creating a really cool photo using repetition. This has allowed me to elevate my photographing skills."

Faith Boyle (12)

"I will take teamwork skills and photography skills learned from Mr. Swanson with me for my future. Also, I've learned the importance of deadlines and getting things done early so that there's enough time to proof everything."

Avery Celo (11)

"The yearbook committee taught me many things, design being a major one. I have learned how to take a concept and turn it into a beautiful spread that others will look at with interest and awe. I've really enjoyed working on yearbook staff."

Jack Coleman (12)

"Having served on the yearbook staff, I have learned to pay attention to detail. Being on photography, you have to take pictures that will fit with the book, and in doing so, it is making the book even better. I think it is an important skill to have moving forward in life."

Bryn Hewitt (11)

"What I will take away from this experience is definitely some of the friendships I've made. Also, I've learned some techniques in photography that will help me for the rest of this year and next year."

Emersyn Lynch (10)

Having served yearbook staff, what will you take with you?

"There are many things I will take with me. Communication—because communication with the staff is key in yearbook. Also, knowing how to manage my time—you always need to know what to get done before a deadline."

Alyssa Mydock (11)

"I got interested in photography by observing items in nature. Yearbook has broadened my skills by allowing me to photograph people in different situations. I've also learned so many techniques that have improved my skills as a photographer."

Jayden Mattis (11)

"Having served on the yearbook staff for three years, I will take many things with me, one being patience. Reporters like myself have to be patient when asking questions. It helped my English writing ability, and I've also gained many friendships through yearbook which makes me very happy."

Madisyn Coulter (12)

"Yearbook has helped me learn how to be more creative with my writing. I can now take a picture and make it more interesting than before. I also have made many more friends being in yearbook."

Sarah Johnson (10)

"I will take with me the ability to talk to people easier. Before serving yearbook staff, I had a hard time speaking with others that I didn't know. I know that the skills I have learned will help me in life."

Peyton Martin (10)

"I gained the ability to get to know people and communicate better with others. Going into a mental health therapy field, I know that the skills that I've learned will come in handy."

What we leave behind...

Editors-in-Chief thank yearbook staff for support

For over 60 years in this same place, thousands of seniors graduated and moved on to their lives' destinies. What We Leave Behind aims to pay respect to those who graduated and the impact each individual left on the school, all while honoring those still here.

To the Photography staff, thank you for striving to take showstopping photos at every event you attend. The book would be so boring without your wonderful pictures. We would like to thank Jack Coleman for portraying the change of time through his photos. You add such a unique aspect to the book. To the Reporting staff, thank you for embracing your extroverted-ness to get the best quotes you can. We all know that these students don't always give us something we can work with. To the Literary staff, thank you for bringing the events of the school and the personalities of the students to life through your stories. You have a way with words that we do not.

To our lovely advisers, Mrs. Gracey and Mr. Swanson, thank you for your hard work on this book. You kept us on track and helped us navigate our new roles as co-editors in chief.

To Mr. Fantaski, thank you for helping us with anything you could. The book would not be the same without your creative ideas. Also, thank you for getting on the literary staff's butts about getting stories done. You definitely made sure we met our deadlines.

To you all, thank you for being amazing advisers and lovely people to work with. This book wouldn't be possible without all of you. Every year brings its own challenges, so we'd like to thank you for pushing through to make the yearbook the best it can be. You all worked so hard, and we're so proud of what we accomplished together. We are so excited to see what's in store for the entire yearbook staff next year!

"Joining the yearbook staff has truly helped me expand my comfort zone. I've always been a fairly reserved person, however, it's strengthened my people skills and ability to start conversations with those I do not know."

Loraine Getty (11)

"Writing for the yearbook challenged me to improve my craft by giving me the opportunity to tell the stories of the people I pass by in the halls every day. The perspective I've gained from this experience will benefit me in the years beyond high school as I pursue a writing degree in college."

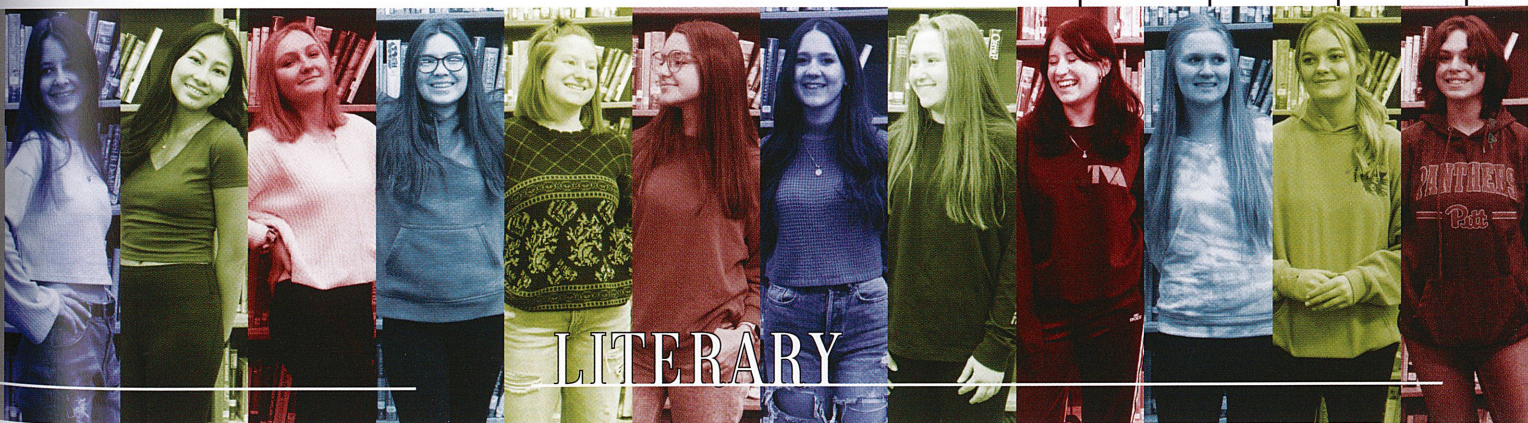

Jordan Glunt (12)

"I will take all the new things I learned and the friendships to improve what I do for yearbook staff next year. Also, I've learned how to write a better story so that the readers will want to read it."

Mackenzie Knapp (11)

"I will take away a new love for writing. Writing and English was never really my forte, but once I joined yearbook in 8th grade and was put on the literary staff, I found that I really enjoy writing yearbook articles."

LITERARY

"Being on the yearbook staff is very important thing to me. What I will be taking with me is my reporting skills. I could never talk to anybody, and I was always so shy talking to people, not outgoing at all. I'm glad for that."

Nevaeh Riggie (11)

"I enjoyed being a part of the yearbook staff this year because of all the people. As this was my first year, I really appreciated all the help from everyone on the staff. All in all, I will take the help I've had this year and try to help others along the way."

Kelina Smith (9)

"I will take all the good memories and new friends I have made. I get to learn new things and have new experiences that I wouldn't have without yearbook. Everything this club has taught me will stay with me forever. I am very thankful for all yearbook has given me."

Caylie Tursky (10)

"Being on the yearbook staff this year has helped me open myself up more and talk to more people. Before the yearbook staff, I was quiet and shy. My writing skills have improved, as well."

Grace Wilferd (11)

"Being able to talk to people I don't know in order to write a story has helped me with my people skills. I've also learned how to write a more engaging story that draws in the reader."

Katelyn Bombalski (12)

"Yearbook staff has really given me a sense of accomplishment. Seeing the yearbook come together very nicely and knowing that I was able to contribute is a really awesome and rewarding feeling."

Sawyer Zanotti (11)

"Yearbook has given me the opportunity to be more communicative with fellow peers I wouldn't normally talk to. Being on the lit staff has widened my ability to write short stories, and express myself through those stories."

Aubrey Carion (11)

"I have learned so much to be able to improve my writing capabilities and better my tactics. I will always take the memories with the three teachers involved. I will be forever grateful for Mr. Fantaski who never gave up on me."

Teens seek comfort/guidance through various religions

Story: G. Kraus (11)

From See You at the Pole to the recently reinstated choral Christmas Concert, faith and religion have blessed members of the student body, some since their early years in the district.

Zach George (11) said, "Since I was born, I've always gone to church, recently St. Gertrude's in Vandergrift. I remember praying with my family before going to bed every night. My grandmother would always give me different prayers to read with my family in every day situations."

Even more involved in spiritual enrichment and guidance, Lucas Vrudney (12) attended Cornerstone Ministries in Murrysville, PA. His involvement there inspired him to spread the faith throughout the school.

Vrudney said, "I started going back to church when I was in seventh grade. Going to Cornerstone has given me peace, and it has established a great family of church goers who support me." At the school, Vrudney served as Bible Club president and led students in morning prayer in a corner of the atrium entrance.

Still, not all individuals felt the need for the Sunday morning ritual of attending church.

"I used to go to church all the time with my family. Over the years, we've not gone as much as we used to. However, praying gives me focus and helps me to stay calm, especially when I'm stressed out," Ryan Neff (11) said.

Just one choice...

Right after the coffee shop opens, Ava Strellec (9) receives her morning tea. Strellec said, "I am a big fan of the vanilla chai tea. Ever since I tried it, that is all I get." Giana Racioppo (9) encouraged Strellec to try vanilla caramel tea. When the coffee shop ran out, Strellec tried the vanilla chai and never looked back.

Kendall Kernan (11) said, "I feel like it's important to give blood because one in three people need blood, but only one in 30 donate." Students at the high school comprised ninety-seven percent of the total donors. CLC collected 41 units of blood products which would help up to 123 area patients. One of the most successful drives in years, Brynn Bires (11) and Lexi Colaianni (11) organized the event.

SURPRISING holiday traditions...

Story: R. Frye (11)

The Feast of Seven Fishes, a horror movie marathon, and a late November run at Kunkle Park. From New Years Eve to Christmas, and holidays in between, three students dished on family traditions of celebration.

On a macabre note, Caden Zambo (10) and his father Wes had a unique Halloween tradition, complete with popcorn.

"Before we go trick-or-treating, we like to watch movies like Friday the 13th, Dr. Sleep, The Shining, Halloween, and Cabin in the Woods," Zambo said.

Adding to the horror film features, his brother Zac has attended from time to time.

For four years on Thanksgiving morning, Ben Young (10) ran the Turkey Trot, a 5K-Run at Kunkle Park sponsored by the Kiski Area Youth Network.

"My dad and I get up early to participate in the event. It gets us pumped for a great meal later in the day," Young said.

At her grandma's house in Moreland Manor, Isabella Delia (10), her mom, and her aunt all gathered around 8 AM on Christmas Eve to start preparing for the Feast of Seven Fishes. It took all day to prepare the spread that typically started around 6 PM.

"I don't like any of it. I've tried salmon, and it was okay. It's a good thing that we have other foods like pasta (lemon ravioli) and ham," Delia said.

World record broken...

For years and years, various clubs and organizations at the high school have joined to collect money for the annual Christmas Telethon. Dating back to the late 1970s, funds collected have benefited the Salvation Army, Children's Hospital, St. Vincent de Paul, the Goodwill, and other local charities. Still, one event collected more money (in pennies) than any other event in history.

The 1980 Telethon broke a world record by gathering 3,297 pounds of pennies; that amounted to a whopping $4,879, breaking a world record for collected copper cents.

Members of the Pittsburgh Steelers attended the Telethon to help recognize the efforts of everyone involved in the monumental event.

Shortly after the release of the cast list for Shrek, the spring musical, Kamryn Suman (11) hugs Isabella Bendtsen (10) after both received feature dancer parts. MARCH Double Diamonds...

A beautiful late March afternoon served as the backdrop for a 4:00 varsity baseball game against Penn Hills and a 5:00 varsity softball game against Woodland Hills.

On the boys' side, Kyle Weiser (2021 grad) set down the Indians in order in the top of the first which sparked a four run offensive explosion in the bottom of the first, highlighted by a two-RBI Carson Craig (2021 grad) triple. Weiser pitched a rock-solid game, and the offense, which included a three-hit performance by Michael Shoemaker (2021 grad), never let up as the home team won their home opener over Penn Hills 14-4 in five innings.

On the girls' side, a bases-clearing triple in the top of the second helped ignite Woodland Hills to an early 4-0 lead. But, pitcher Hannah Simpson (11) battled, and the offense found their bats as they fought to a 5-5 tie in the bottom of the fifth inning. Unfortunately, the Wolverines plated four runs in the top of the seventh to spoil the home opener and beat the Lady Cavs 9-5. Simpson recorded 16 strikeouts in the defeat.

Jolly Roger raised...

With low expectations by the fans for the Pirates '21 campaign, the team traveled to Chicago to take on the Cubs in their season opener. In his first at-bat of the season, rookie third baseman Ke'Bryan Hayes launched a 410-foot home run into the wind in left field at Wrigley Field to lift the Pirates to an early 2-0 first inning lead. Chad Kuhl started the game, and six relievers each pitched one inning as they helped finish out the Pirates' 5-3 victory. Reliever Sam Howard earned the win, and Richard Rodriguez closed out the ninth for his first save of the year. Adam Frazier also shined at the plate going 2-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored.

Baylor Bears bully Bulldogs...

The Gonzaga Bulldogs appeared to become the team of destiny with an undefeated season going into the championship game and a miraculous buzzer-beater three-pointer to win their semifinal matchup against UCLA. However, the Baylor Bears' squad had their own thoughts about Gonzaga's season.

In the NCAA Men's Basketball Championship

Game, Baylor raced out to a 9-0 lead. Halfway through the first half, they had increased it to 29-10. Gonzaga cut into the lead, but never had their deficit margin below nine points. The win represented Baylor's first men's basketball championship and ended Gonzaga's quest to become the first undefeated champion since the 1976 Indiana Hoosiers.

Trivia aficionado Eddie Fuhrer (2021 grad) competed in the Individual Player National Tournament sponsored by the National Academic Quiz Tournaments. In a field of 111 competitors spread amongst 23 states and the District of Columbia, Fuhrer fought his way to a 44th place finish. With his strengths in political science, history, English, and current events, a place on the game show Jeopardy! may sit in Fuhrer's future.

Playing at PNC...

The boys' baseball team got the opportunity to play on the same field that many of Major League Baseball's greats have set foot. PNC Park served as the backdrop for a non-section game against Seneca Valley. The Raiders needed an opponent for this game, and Athletic Director John Peterman jumped at the chance. The game turned into a back and forth affair with Seneca Valley taking a 3-2 lead in the bottom of the third inning. However, the fightin' Cavs did not let that last long as they tied it up when Evan Culp (12) reached base on an error.

With the game knotted at 3-3, both pitching staffs dominated through the end of the seven-inning game. Derek Hald (2021 grad) went two for three, and LeBryn Smith (11) and Carson Craig (2021 grad) each pitched two scoreless innings.

Guarded performances...

An evening exhibition in Gym A with four sets of Kiski winterguards produced four entertaining performances. To top it off, the Slippery Rock University Winterguard showed off their skills for the parents and family members.

The two high school squads performed their shows En"light"en and Heart of Gold. Sidney Mowers (12) said, "It was the first time in a long time that we performed in front of a large crowd, so it was really nice to feed off the energy of the audience."

Hannah hurls no-no...

Avenging an early-season loss to Woodland Hills brought out a gem of a pitching performance from Hannah Simpson (11). An early 2-0 first inning lead that eventually grew to 8-0 allowed Simpson to find her groove and pitch a no-hitter with 18 strikeouts against the Wolverines. Woodland Hills only put the ball in play three times in the seven-inning affair.

Inductions done differently...

The National Honor Society (NHS) Induction Ceremony took on a much-earlier-in-the-day feel. Normally held in the evening, sponsors Mrs. Flick and Ms. Richert decided to honor the new inductees and the outgoing members with a split event. Due to a large inductee class and a smaller venue (LGI room instead of the auditorium), the ceremony occurred in the following waves: 9:30-10:30 AM for seniors, juniors, and track attendees with 12:30-1:30 PM reserved for the sophomores.

"It was a nice ceremony, but I wished it could have been in the evening and our parents could have attended," Lexi Colaanni (11) said.

An announcement from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) announced that all vaccinated individuals no longer needed to wear a mask in most situations. This marked a big step towards a return to pre-pandemic life. While still urging all Americans to get vaccinated, President Joe Biden said, "If you are fully vaccinated, you no longer need to wear a mask. Get vaccinated, or wear a mask until you do." At the time, masks could still become a "must" in public transportation settings, hospitals, and businesses that chose to continue with the mandate.

Starting in 2015, Fuhrer became the first player named to the first team from Westmoreland County and the first western Pennsylvanian that did not attend Central Catholic or Allderdice High School.

Testing commencement...

The Advanced Placement Physics C test started the AP testing season with AP Statistics concluding it. In the afternoon of the 25th, 83 students piled into the library to hopefully earn at least a three, but preferably a four or five on the test to receive college credit in statistics. Overall, 613 students in 14 subjects spread over three and half weeks attempted the feat. Even freshmen got into the action with some taking the AP US History test and others taking the AP Computer Science Principles test. Students expected to learn their fate with the release of the scores in July.

Boneheaded Bucco gaffe...

A 12:35 Pirate game, a beautiful sun-filled day, a home run catch by Zachary Hald (7), and a colossal gaffe on the part of the Bucs gave members of the Class of '21 a memorable event at the conclusion of their high school careers. While the Pirates ended up losing the game 5-3 to the Chicago Cubs, two runs should have never happened as first baseman Will Craig forgot that stepping on first base would have ended the third inning and prevented any runs from scoring. Unfortunately, after a sharply hit ball to third base, the throw across the diamond to get Javier Baez of the Cubs pulled Craig off of the bag. Baez stopped and ran back towards home. Craig chased Baez. In the meantime, Willson Contreras scored from second and miraculously, Baez evaded any tag and wound up at second base. He eventually scored. The brain freeze by Craig would have been completely avoided had he simply stepped on first base when Baez stopped in the baseline. That would have chalked up the third out, and no runs would have scored. At least Hald (younger brother of Derek Hald (2021 grad)) made it onto AT&T Sportsnet with a pretty impressive catch in right centerfield of a home run off the bat of Pirates' catcher Michael Perez in the 7th inning.

Test, return, distribute...

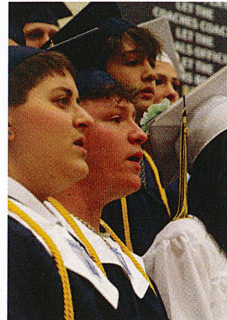

The day started with the last round of Keystone Literature exams. Upon the conclusion of the state-mandated assessment, the library transformed from a testing arena into a yearbook distribution center. Approximately 450 students signed for their yearbooks and took home the 59th edition of Campus. Beyond that, members of the Class of '21 also turned in their books and Chromebooks; they received their caps and gowns in the Atrium. Due to the concerns over the pandemic, over 100 students entered the building for the first time all year.

An unpredictable weather pattern forced the decision to move the graduation ceremonies indoors for the Class of '21. With a packed house in Gym A, Master of Ceremonies Eddie Fuhrer introduced all of the speakers, which included fellow graduates Anthony Delia and Rebekah Fowler. Running against the best in the state in the AAA classification, the team finished 14th out of 23 teams with a time of 9:56.35. The race capped off the high school track and field careers of Schrag and Fairman, and both planned to continue at their respective universities of IUP and Seton Hill.

He also had strung together shutouts in five consecutive playoff-series-clinching games (including the 2020 Stanley Cup championship).

The War on Terror began after the hijacking and crashing of planes at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and Shanksville, PA. The final planes that airlifted thousands of Americans and Afghans left amid chaos and a Taliban takeover of the country. Officials mandated a maximum of three sets for the junior varsity volleyball team and a maximum of five sets for the varsity squad. The matches against the Greensburg Salem Golden Lions went the maximum distance in both matchups as the home teams took home a pair of victories. The junior varsity girls claimed the decisive third set, winning by the score of 15-11. Their long match delayed the start of the 7:00 varsity match, which developed into a first set back-and-forth thriller that ended with a 29-27 victory for the Lady Cavs. The Golden Lions won the next two sets, but KA finished strong with fourth and fifth set victories by scores of 25-21 and 15-10.

Regarding playing on grass, Bryn Hewitt (11) said, "It was slippery at times. We all wore tennis shoes, but cleats would have helped out with the slipperiness."

Food trucks enabled fans to enjoy a meal and snacks during the contest as a healthy crowd showed up to see the home team fall short against the Knights 3-1. "I really liked the event. The low scoring affair saw only one touchdown when Brock Wilkins (12) broke through for a 37-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter. During halftime, Jocelyn Spencer (12) heard her name over the speakers, indicating that she garnered the most votes for Homecoming Queen. In the spirit of getting back to normal, a Homecoming Dance ensued on Saturday night. Students enjoyed an evening of dressing up, dancing, and socializing in the end zone of the football field nearest the concession stand for the affair. Career-focused creations captured...

With the high volume of students that Kiski Area sends to the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center (NWCTC), the yearbook staff spent a pair of afternoons at the school to capture students in a different academic setting. Mr. Swanson took staffers on Oct. 5 while Mrs. Gracey went on Oct. 6. Cameras snapped, pens and pencils wrote, and clever minds created prose to tell the story of the NWCTC. After an afternoon of hard work, the staffers that went enjoyed a cool treat at the local Dairy Queen.

Lizeth Sesmas (12), Payton Sullivan (12), Josette Plazio (12), and Taylor Roland (9) rounded out the team's top five. The girls finished with six wins and two losses for the day. The boys' team also finished the day with a 6-2 record. Antonio Giordano (12), Paul Roberts (10), Justin Tucker (9), Hunter Heinack (10), and Phillip Miller (12) all finished within 1:02 of each other. This earned both teams a third place finish in the section.

They performed at 1:00PM for the Class AA preliminary round and took first place. For the finals, the band performed at 10:15PM and subsequently took first place again to win the entire competition. To add icing to the cake, they also earned the distinctions of Outstanding Music Performance, Outstanding Visual Performance, and Outstanding General Effect in both preliminary and final rounds. Audrey DeTurck (12) said, "I was surprised we won, but it was a great way to close out my senior year. A lot of hard work went into it and it really paid off." The sixth-seeded boys' soccer team took their higher ranking and bested the tenth seeded Gateway Gators 5-1 in the first round of the WPIAL 3A playoffs. Greensburg Salem rattled off three quick goals in the power play, but the team finished off the penalty and held on for the 6-5 win. A light night of music...

Cookies and Cantata helped raise funds for the Kiski Area Chorus Programs. At $5 per ticket, audience members ate cookies, watched the performers, and enjoyed an evening of music. Shannon Brown (12) said, "It was a great opportunity for chorus and ensemble members to sing the song of their choice, showcase their individual musical talents, and share their artistic love of music." Bryant Brzozowski (12) opened the show, Brown closed it, and a few performers showed off their piano and ukulele skills.

Conn-vincing win...

The thirteenth-seeded girls' soccer team traveled to Connellsville for their first round playoff match-up and came home with a victory. Riley Koziatek (11) opened the scoring late in the first half with a goal after she got behind the defense. After Connellsville got the tying goal, Koziatek fed Payton Buffone (11) with 12 minutes left in the game and the defense held on for the 2-1 win.

The second round did not go as well as Montour shut them down 5-0.

Corralled by Al Gal...

The nineteenth-seeded volleyball team also had a long road trip to Fayette County for their pigtail round playoff match-up, but unfortunately came up short in a hard-fought 3-0 loss to Albert Gallatin.

Many students took advantage of their last chance to get their picture taken for the yearbook. Strawbridge Studios set up three stations in the library to photograph anyone who missed the previous picture days in August and September or who wanted a retake. On average, 40-50 seniors neglect to get their picture taken for the yearbook, but this year's shortfall consisted of only about 15 seniors.

No longer preoccupied with 1995...

A dynasty in the '90s and early 2000s resulted in only one championship for the Atlanta Braves. After their fourth straight National League East crown and a 26 year World Series championship wait, the Braves defeated the Houston Astros four games to two. The Braves missed the opportunity to clinch the series on Halloween night in their home ballpark when the Astros came back from an early 4-0 deficit to win. Max Fried took the mound in game six and cemented the championship by pitching six innings of shutout ball. The Braves won the decisive game 7-0. It represented the second World Series championship for the franchise since it moved to Atlanta in 1966. Jorge Soler earned the World Series MVP Award and clinched it with a towering three run home run in game six. He started the season with the Kansas City Royals, but after the trade to Atlanta at the trade deadline, he finished the season on a tear.

The acting spirit returneth...

The Fall Drama returned after a one-year hiatus for a three night run in the auditorium. Blithe Spirit, a play by Noel Coward, entertained the audience and allowed the cast to show their acting skills in a more-traditional setting not seen in a couple of years. Miss Kaylee Hansberry made her directorial debut for her alma mater. Shannon Brown (12), Bryant Brzozowski (12), and Madison Leith (12) led the cast through the three performances. The play revolved around the socialite and novelist Charles Condomine, who invited the eccentric medium and clairvoyant, Madame Arcati, to his house to conduct a séance, hoping to gather material for his next book. The scheme backfired when the ghost of his annoying and temperamental first wife Elvira haunted him after the séance. Elvira made continual attempts to disrupt Charles' marriage to his second wife Ruth who cannot see or hear the ghost.

Eliza Miller (10) capped off her record-setting running season with an eleventh place finish at the PIAA Cross Country 3A Championships at Hershey, PA. She navigated the hilly course to medal in the race with a time of 18:57.1. Miller said, "My experience at states was completely different than last year. The weather conditions were much cooler, there were double the people, and I placed way better and my time was much faster. I hope to continue this success into the next season."

WHAT about SWAT...

Mrs. McAfee's Criminal Law class enjoyed a Lunch and Learn with the Westmoreland County SWAT team. They discussed the vital role they play within the community executing search warrants, diffusing hostage situations, and protecting the public. Nathaniel Fouse (11), who stayed back from Vo-Tech for the demonstration, felt he learned a lot from the SWAT team members. He said, "I asked the guys that if I can successfully parallel park their M-RAB (military vehicle), can I take it home with me? They said I could, but I never got the opportunity."

Finagling a fire drill on a fine day...

If a school must complete one fire drill per month, then any school in the north can not pass up a 67-degree day in November to fulfill that month's requirement. At approximately 1:40PM, the extreme screeching sound of the fire drill emanated throughout the hallways as students filed out of their classrooms to the front parking lot. While the fire drill ended up uneventful, the warm November temperature made it a welcome distraction.

Anticipation...

To those who auditioned for the spring musical production of Shrek, learning the part they got became paramount to the impending Thanksgiving break. Prior to a two-hour early dismissal on Wednesday, Mr. Capanna posted the cast list in the atrium at about 12:35PM (with dismissal at 12:45PM). Tears of joy flowed as students learned their parts, while some disappointment inevitably happened too. Due to the COVID-19, a return to a traditional musical amped up the anticipation. Upon learning that she earned the role of Donkey, Akila Yaw (12) said, "I was very surprised because I didn't think I'd get it." Kamryn Suman (11) said, "My mind was racing, I was super happy to see that I am a featured dancer."

Stirring rendition...

Bestowed with the honor of singing the National Anthem at Heinz Field prior to kickoff of the WPIAL 5A championship football game between Penn Trafford and Moon Area, Bryant Brzozowski (12) wowed the crowd with his vocal prowess. Brzozowski said, "It was awesome. As a staff member from Heinz Field led us to the field, we walked by Art Rooney's office and saw the gold shovel and silver shovel that broke ground on the construction of Heinz Field and Three Rivers Stadium. Walking out of the tunnel into the snow in front of 6000 people was amazing." After finishing his rendition, Brzozowski did not know what to do next, so he took a bow to each group of fans which gave the stadium staffer a good chuckle.

The ultimate gift...

With the help of members of the Cavalier Leadership Council (CLC), Vitalant set up stations in Gym B to collect blood from volunteers in school and throughout the community. Sixteen and 17-year-olds needed to provide parental permission, while those 18 and older could give blood of their own free will. Forty students contributed to the effort while another 12 adults, consisting of staff and community members, produced 41 units of blood products which would help up to 123 area patients. Mrs. Poleski, adviser of CLC, said, "This was the best blood drive in terms of the number of donors in at least a decade."

Grand openers...

The boys' and girls' basketball teams opened their respective seasons on high notes as they both won their opening round tournament games. The boys greeted new coach and Kiski Area alumnus Corey Smith with an 81-45 win over Derry in the Burrell Tournament. James Pearson (12) led all scorers with 21 points, while Logan Johnson (12) chipped in 16 points including four three-pointers. In the girls' bracket of the Burrell Tournament, Abbie Johns (10) scored 19 points, Lexi Colaianne (11) assisted with 12 points of her own, while Cora Coleman (10) chipped in 10 points to pace the team to a 48-36 win over Burrell. (On Saturday, the boys followed up by winning the boys' tournament beating Burrell 53-47, while the girls lost the championship game to Homer Center 57-41.)

Widespread destruction...

Over 30 tornadoes ravaged six states with towns such as Mayfield, KY almost totally destroyed. The outbreak started in Arkansas and damaged homes and businesses in Missouri, Kentucky, Illinois, Tennessee, and Indiana. A tornado leveled a candle factory in Mayfield that contained over 100 workers at the time.

An Amazon warehouse in Edwardsville, IL also saw similar devastation. In 1925, a tornado traveled 219 miles on the ground in Missouri. Friday's outbreak produced a record-breaker as one tornado may have traveled 223 miles. Eighty-eight people died as a result of this storm front.

Good Intentions...

Senior football players Brandon Lawhorn Moore and Brock Wilkins officially committed to continue their studies and football at Miami University and the University of Pittsburgh respectively. Family and friends gathered before the start of the school day in the LGI room to watch as they signed their National Letters of Intent and to encourage and celebrate the momentous occasion. Wilkins said, "I kept mine under wraps so no one really knew that I was committing to Pitt until I signed."

Fail break...

A pizza party acted as a reward to motivate each CAV room to donate money to keep Principal Gonnella in jail as long as possible. Student Council sponsored the fundraiser for the annual CAV-a-Thon. Mr. Gonnella made sure to alert all passersby in the atrium to give money to the cause. One student,

Frankie King (10), took time out to help pray Mr. G's way out of jail. The fundraiser collected $620.11, and when combined with donations from the other schools in the district, helped the Kiski Valley Food Bank, Stuff-a-Bus, and the Alle-Kiski HOPE Center. Mrs. Miller's CAV room earned a pizza lunch for raising the most money as a CAV room.

Dog days of L&L...

Mrs. McAfee's Criminal Law classes enjoyed a Lunch and Learn that went to the dogs. Officer Mark Heider of the Middlesex Township Police Department brought his working dog Mibo and his personal pet Finn to the school for a discussion about bomb-sniffing dogs and what they do. Mibo came to the department from Germany where he had undergone his special training. He could detect 19 different odors and took his commands in Czech. Mibo has worked jobs such as sniffing out Heinz Field and PPG Paints Arena prior to Steelers and Penguins games. Students feasted on a taco bar prior to the discussion. Emma Beck (12) said, "The presentation was awesome. I thought it was cool how the dog was trained in a different language."

Major milestone...

At the Moon Duals Wrestling Tournament, the wrestling team finished the day with a 4-1 record and third place finish. However, the team helped earn Coach Chris Heater his 500th victory with the program. The 52-28 victory over Beth-Center in their third match of the day gave him his benchmark win. Heater moved into head coach's role after the retirement of longtime wrestling coach Chuck Tursky in 2015.

Holiday Spirit Week and Spanish class caroling marked the anticipation of a well-deserved long break for Christmas and New Year's. Frenetic NFL...

A weekend of NFL playoffs had never produced a quartet of games that ended with a game-winning field goal or a sudden death overtime touchdown. Almost all of the roads teams left the opposing stadiums joyous as the Cincinnati Bengals knocked off the Tennessee Titans 19-16, the San Francisco 49ers triumphed over the Green Bay Packers 13-10, the Los Angeles Rams beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 30-27, and in what some people consider the greatest game ever, the Kansas City Chiefs outlasted the Buffalo Bills 42-36. In the finale, Josh Allen of the Bills connected with Gabriel Davis for what most people considered the game-winning touchdown as Buffalo took a 36-33 lead with 13 seconds left. Patrick Mahomes of the Chiefs connected with two receivers to go 44 yards in 10 seconds to set up the game tying field goal. Kansas City won the coin toss and proceeded to march down the field for the game-winning touchdown and a date one week later in the AFC Championship game against Cincinnati. Jayden Mattis (11) said, "What a roller coaster of games all weekend long."

Bulldog nation celebration...

The NCAA Football Bowl Series Champion went to the Georgia Bulldogs as they overcame a five-point fourth quarter deficit to defeat the reigning champion Alabama Crimson Tide. Former walk-on quarterback turned starter Stetson Bennett and the relentless Bulldog defense helped them to capture their first championship since 1980. Lately, Georgia has hovered around the top of the Southeastern Conference (SEC), but kept coming up short against Alabama. A late interception returned for a touchdown sealed the deal in Georgia's 33-18 victory. Bennett earned the offensive Most Valuable Player (MVP) award of the game, while Bulldog safety Lewis Cine collected the defensive MVP award. Georgia's head coach Kirby Smart, a longtime assistant on Alabama coach Nick Saban's staff, finally got one over on his mentor.

Bowling for medals...

The first ever Westmoreland County Coaches' Association Bowling Championships took place at Lincoln Lanes in Latrobe. The girls' team, comprised of Veronica Flanagan (9), Savannah Renwick (12), Haley Zeller (10), Alyssa Leya (9), and Phoebe Richard (10), knocked over 2416 pins to take home the second place team crown. They came up short by only seven pins to Penn Trafford's 2423 pins. Finishing in the top ten to earn a medal included Flanagan, Renwick, Zeller, and Leya.

Home grown talent...

The Key Club Talent Show returned with a vengeance as approximately 250 spectators watched as elementary through high school students performed 17 acts. Dancers, singers, hula hoopers, and karate masters entertained the audience for the two hour show. At the high school level, Lucas Vrudney (12) took home the crown as Bryant Brzozowski (12) and Landon Newell (12) took second and third place respectively. Vrudney's rendition of Home by Phillip Phillips wowed the crowd and impressed the panel of judges. Proceeds from the show, which totaled about $1000, went towards the spring musical.

For the second year in a row, the wrestling team captured the Section 1-3A title. A semifinal win over Penn-Trafford 59-9 led to a 40-29 victory over the host Franklin Regional Panthers to capture the crown. The championship catapulted the wrestling team to its 26th section title in program history. Carter Dilts (12) said, "It was a great feeling to win the section title in back to back years. Franklin Regional is horrible, and I have a very strong dislike for them."

Flexible education...

Ill-timed snow and bitterly cold weather led to a week of two-hour delays and an end-of-the-week virtual day (on the two-hour delay schedule) for the district. Only Wednesday saw a normal 7:40AM - 2:45PM school day. The Friday virtual day came as the biggest surprise as weather forecasters predicted the snow that marched across the country would stay to the south and give western Pennsylvania a dusting. However, the timing of the snow made the roads treacherous which caused the call for the virtual day.

A great day in the Derry Area High School pool occurred for the swim team at the Westmoreland County Coaches' Association swimming championships. Highlights listed below:

- Parker Sterlitz (11) 1st place in the 500 Freestyle (Set the county meet record) and 2nd place in the 200 Freestyle
- Eliza Miller (10) 1st place in the 100 Breaststroke and 200 IM
- Levi Hansen (11) 1st place in the 200 Freestyle and 2nd in the 100 Fly

Phil doing Phil things...

"With my shadow I have cast, then a long, lustrous six more weeks of winter." Punxsutawney Phil's annual prognostication involved the news most western Pennsylvania's didn't want to hear. However, Phil's prediction started off right on point when a winter storm warning descended upon the area as rain, freezing rain, and snow marched its way through the Pittsburgh area. A virtual instruction day phone call alert for February 3 went out to the community at about 4:30 PM.

Playoff bound...

After a rough last season where the boys won only five games, the basketball team clinched the third place spot in the section and a place in the playoffs. On the road in Latrobe, the Wildcats hung around to make the game more interesting than expected. Trailing by one after three quarters, James Pearson (12) scored nine points and grabbed eight rebounds in the fourth quarter to help the team secure the 77-69 victory and cement the 19th playoff berth in school history.

Stupendous Stafford...

Following 12 years of futility playing for the hapless Detroit Lions, Matthew Stafford welcomed a trade in the offseason to the Los Angeles Rams and won a Super Bowl. Trailing the Cincinnati Bengals by four with over six minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, Stafford took the Rams down the field and connected with wide receiver Cooper Kupp for a one-yard go-ahead touchdown with 1:29 left in the game. Cincinnati took the kickoff and marched 26 yards before Aaron Donald and the Rams put an end to the drive and subsequently, the game. The Super Bowl LVI victory represented a second championship for the Rams' franchise, but their first while playing in Los Angeles. Kupp earned Super Bowl MVP honors with his eight catches for 92 yards and two touchdowns.

Can't miss Colaianne...

During the Valentine's Day match-up against Freeport High School, Lexi Colaianne (11) fell in love with the three-point shot and unofficially set the school record for most three-point shots made in a game. With a hot hand, Colaianne hit nine three pointers in the game and scored a total of 27 as they took down the Yellowjackets 61-37. Colaianne bested the previous mark of seven three pointers that she, Abbie Johns (10), and Michael Simmons (2015 grad) had achieved. Colaianne said, "Coach encouraged me to keep shooting the threes. I was in the zone."

Opened in 1927 and closed in 2013, the Washington Township Elementary building dwindled to a pile of rubble. The future of the lot included becoming an 11-acre lot to house recreational vehicles for Meyer's RV Sales of Pittsburgh. The building transformed through the years from a high school to a junior high and eventually an elementary school. Central administration reported to the building during the renovation of the high school in the early 2000s.

86 Key Club members conjured up their best Dr. Seuss tributes and traveled to the three primary schools and the upper elementary school to read and do activities with students in grades kindergarten through six in a total of 80 classrooms (including one virtual classroom). High school students boarded buses bound for the elementary schools at 8:45 AM and returned around 11:00 AM. Madison Dodek (12) said, "I really enjoyed it. MACEY AND CJ

Nobody prepares you for a set of twins
With extra laughter, double grins

There's so much fun in having two
Twice as many points of view

So much alike, forever linked
You are more similar that one may think

You entered the world, together as one
And since that point, it's been nothing but fun

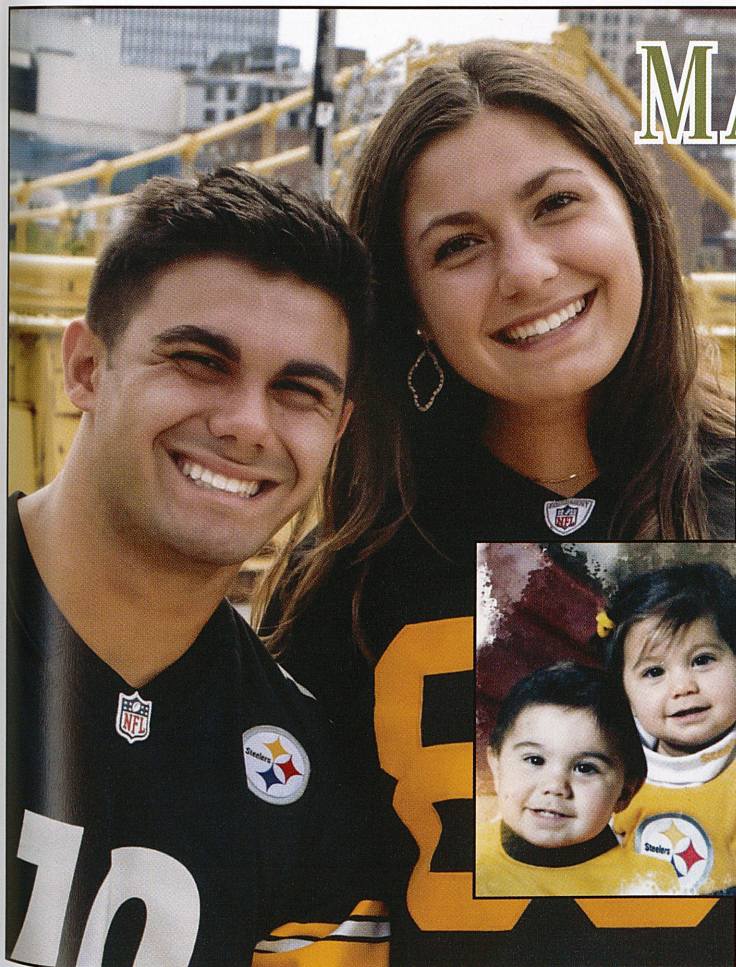

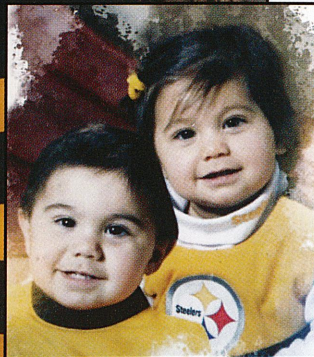

You are beautiful people who help us all
Your personalities are big, your stature small :)

Though you may walk a separate path
Keep that smile, and laugh that laugh

Macey and CJ, your future is bright
Keep your head high, keep doing what's right

You're kind and smart, very mature
Your hearts are special, and we love you more

With so much love,
Mom, Dad, Katie, Maddy, Morgan, Kenley, Todd, Situ, Pap Mike, Mema Kath, Pappy Bill, Annie, and Eric

"Thank you to Mr. Yuhasz for letting me meet my boyfriend, even if he said we wouldn't last long. You're my number one supporter."

What memories will you take with you from your time here at the Big K?

"The burning of a Hot Pocket that stunk up the building, and we had to spend some time outside until they figured out what it was all about."

As Miranda Crofutt (11) rockets her sabre in the air, Audrey DeTurck (12) wraps her flag silk around her. "I really enjoy going to competitions and seeing and hearing people get really into the show, especially people that aren't in the guard world," DeTurck said. She enjoyed the current show the most because, as a senior, she related to the show's theme of not wanting to grow up.

Connor said, "There is nothing better than beating Franklin Regional in any competition, at any time, on any day, on any field or classroom." Connor crushed Panther Ben Pekarick (12) 10-6 when they wrestled earlier in the season.

I came, I saw, I conquered...

In preparation for Shrek the Musical, Annie Bowser (11) cuts a 2x4 for the altar in the church scene. "Using the saw created a small dust cloud because the vacuum only could catch so much of the dust. So, at the end of each evening, we had to sweep the stage for what was missed," Bowser said. As her first true musical, Bowser had consternations about opening night for herself and the stage crew.

So many adjustments...

After a school year where 75% of the students learned remotely, "Welcome Back" took on a whole new meaning as not only freshmen, but a lot of sophomores had to get acquainted with the layout of the high school, find their spot during Lunch and Learn, and get used to seeing everyone every day again. Even though juniors and seniors had a good familiarity with the school building, they also had to refamiliarize themselves with the regular routine of the school day. As the year progressed and the masks came off, Laken Robshaw (11) felt that the middle of the second nine-weeks provided that tipping point where school-as-we-knew-it had finally returned. "The assignments seemed to be longer and more stressful again. That's when I noticed that school was 'back to normal'," Robshaw said.

AT WE LEFT behind

A 60-year celebration of everything Cavalier

Story: R. Frye (11)

Still nestled in the rolling hills of northwestern Westmoreland County sat Kiski Area High School, but in a different time.

The 2021-2022 school year marked the contended end of COVID-19 to which many FULL faces reappeared in the halls, events like the Key Club Talent Show made a comeback, and students left with new mind-souvenirs, both big and small.

"One thing I definitely won't forget is sitting next to Rachel in the back of history class. We ended up the friends who didn't pay attention to anything because they were too busy messing around," Cody Fox (10) said.

Aware of the situation, Mr. Odrechowski said, "I am still convinced they're dating."

"The Homecoming Game was pretty lit with the crowd filling the stands," Xavior Ford (10) said. For two years, the stands stood empty.

"After seven years in color guard and winter guard, I wouldn't trade any of the experiences I've had for anything, even Neverland," Maycee Auden said. The Scholastic Open Winterguard topped the nation in rankings all season with their Peter Pan-themed show, Second Star from the Right.

What we leave behind is the same as the other 59 graduating classes — what we did, and what we'll do. Both extraordinary.

senior TRIBUTES

During the first week of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything parents need to know about Senior Tributes. The form details pricing, requirements for the ad, and deadlines.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Senior Tributes. Therefore, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Senior Tributes once the designated amount of space has become filled.

Because the yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will not refund money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, incorrect grade designation in captions, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them and cannot display any obvious damage done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes property of the staff and may be resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the advisers determine that the book has a major flaw such as missing or upside-down pages. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the advisers.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a canceled check or ordering receipt to demonstrate proof of purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

Featuring: Principal Anthony Gonnella (Penns Hills 1977 Grad)

The senior photographer will take pictures during students' English classes and provide a variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student arrives promptly for his/her appointment for the shoot and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates and will include these in the information distributed via email.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of the students.

The Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. The staff tries to include only categories that reflect positively on the students.

Only the yearbook advisers have access to the ballots. The yearbook staff plays no role in the election.

To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook advisers govern the final decision on how to award them.

Students order books online or in-person. Students must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside of the library.

Alternatively, students and parents can order their yearbooks online at yearbookforever.com. If ordering online, students have additional options to customize their book.

The price of the book started at $60, went up to $65 on September 1 and $75 on January 8.

If the staff has books available at the end of the year, they will sell them on a first-come-first-serve basis for $85.

It all started right here at an old airport built back in the early 1900s. The featured hangar once sat at the location of the upper school entrance across from Kings.

Rain, snow, and wind have certainly played havoc on the high school over the years. With torrential downpours, blizzard-like conditions, and a twister that lifted part of the auditorium roof off, the district had to cancel school for days upon days at times.

Twist of Fate

On Tuesday, the 3rd of June, 1980, tornadoes ravaged their way through the Kiski Valley. Leaving behind a devastating path of debris, the twisters caused millions of dollars in damages.

On campus, the tornadoes only damaged the Arts Building. Workers had to replace the roof above the shops and also repair many floors and ceilings due to water damage.

Let It Snow

On March 12-13, 1993, a blizzard brought the Pittsburgh area to a standstill. Snowing at a rate of two-three inches per hour, the storm accumulated a shocking 25 inches of snow. In its two-day period, one-third of the yearly snow amounts for 1993 had fallen.

Ivan the Terrible

On Friday, September 17, 2004, Hurricane Ivan rained down on an already saturated western Pennsylvania. Dumping up to nine inches of rain, the downpours triggered massive flooding and mud slides across the area which closed hundreds of roadways and bridges. Ivan's torment broke the just-set rainfall records from the week before.

Unbearable Heat

On Tuesday, September 4 and Wednesday, September 5 of 2018, scorching heat and humidity affected the Pittsburgh area. With record-setting temperatures in the mid-90s, sports teams were forced to practice before school. To provide relief to students and staff, the district implemented two two-hour early dismissals and moved the September 5 date for Open House to October 2.

Washout Rains

From Saturday, September 8 to Monday, September 10 of 2019, drenching downpours blanketed western Pennsylvania. Creeks overflowed their banks and rivers swelled to record heights. Impassable roads like Allegheny Hyde Park Road opened up craters big enough to swallow a Volkswagen Beetle.

THE TUNNEL

The 307-foot tunnel closed in the late 1980s for several reasons. First, the ceiling kept leaking and patches failed to work. Secondly, administration felt that it became too difficult to patrol the students as they traveled through. Lastly, it presented a lighting problem that became too costly to fix.

THE OBSERVATORY

and other bodies at night. In its day, many clubs and organizations utilized the equipment in the observatory.

THE WALKWAY

A mere skeleton of its former self, Larson Construction Company erected the framework for the walkway and the administration building on August 15, 1961. Sadly, the covered sidewalk fell victim to the most recent renovations.

WPIAL glory...

During the WPIAL Championship Game, quarterback Tom Giotto (1972 grad) throws a jump pass which eventually finds the hands of Joe Stone (1973 grad) for eight yards and a first down.

Slated to become a rebuilding year, the 1971 season, instead, concluded with an undefeated 12-0 record, a third straight Foothills Conference Championship, and a WPIAL AA Title. A 48-20 win over Norwin started the season, and a decisive 56-6 win over Highlands ended the regular season. Penn Hills brought a good fight to the first playoff game, but Joe Stone (1973 grad) broke the 6-6 tie with a field goal with 37 seconds on the clock. At Pitt Stadium, Thomas Jefferson fell in the title game 16-8, marking Kiski's first and only WPIAL football championship.

From 1997 to 2019, the wrestling team captured six WPIAL team championships, including a three year run in '17, '18, and '19. Known throughout Pennsylvania as a powerhouse program, individual state champions occurred in 2012 with Matt McCutcheon at 182 pounds, Isaac Reid in 2018 at 285 pounds, and Darren Miller in 2019 at 126 pounds. Coach Chuck Tursky took over the program in 1987 with a seamless transition to current coach Chris Heater when Tursky retired as the head coach. Coach Don Toy served on Tursky's staff for 26 years. Between Tursky, Heater, and Toy, the wrestling program has enjoyed an unprecedented level of stability and reign over western Pennsylvania wrestling.

The members of the girls' 1996 cross country team gave it all to defeat their opponents and conquer the hills, mud pits, and other challenges they faced throughout the 3.1 mile courses. The blazing sun in August and single-digit wind chills in early November also tested the runners' limits. The girls were section champs for the eighth year in a row and finished first at four invitationals and the County meet. However, the climax of their season happened when they defended their WPIAL and PIAA titles. Tri-captains and seniors Amy Lion, Kristen Kimble, and Sandra Smith found winning states in 1996 more special because the team had to deal with pressure and expectations to repeat.

MOST masterful COACHING

Dick Dilts (football)

Legendary football coach Richard Dilts brought toughness and tenacity to the football teams with 13 conference titles and the school's only WPIAL championship. His career included over 200 wins when he retired in 1993.

Chuck Tursky (wrestling)

Claiming WPIAL team titles in 1997 and 2003 and sporting 505 victories between Burrell HS and Kiski Area HS, Coach Chuck Tursky earned every accolade he received. He also became PIAA Coach of the Year in 2003.

Note: To create the following time line, the 2007 Campus editorial staff spent two days in the high school library researching and analyzing each of the Kiski yearbooks since 1963 to gather all of the information that follows for an Alumni Directory. While some books displayed obvious landmarks to include, others did not. Additionally, please realize that a discrepancy exists in the nature of high school sports years for the fall and winter sports as they sometimes lag a year behind in records. Still, enjoy and reminisce through a timed history of Cavaliers past.

HOW Learning has CHANGED

Teaching and learning has changed tremendously in the last 60 years. Chalk, chalkboards, and erasers as a mode of presentation evolved into the use of overhead projectors with markers since teachers could use more colors in their presentations. Whiteboards with dry erase markers followed and allowed for more room to write. Finally, SMART boards and Promethean boards enabled teachers to use laptops, Chromebooks, and tablets to raise the level of their presentations to a much higher level. Technology forced Mr. McKenzie to change his bulleted notes on the overhead into bulleted notes on the Chromebook.

Students in 1962 relied on pencils, pens, erasers, and lined paper to complete assignments. While many classes relied on these apparatus, the advent of the one-to-one Chromebook initiative turned a lot of handwritten and hand-turned-in assignments into digital pieces where students logged into their Google Classroom to submit their work. In math, calculating through the years happened on abacuses, then slide rules, then four-function calculators, then scientific calculators, and finally graphing calculators. The huge, heavy graphing calculator turned into a phone and Chromebook app. This ended the age-old excuse, "The dog ate my homework."

Movies that teachers wanted students to see used to run through a film projector. The advent of video cassettes relegated the projectors to the archives, except for those that lived through Mr. Vergari's annual showing of the classic film about the fictional winter storm Maria (pronounced ma-rye-ah) that lashed California. DVDs, which bumped out the video cassettes, eventually lost out to digital videos that one could easily find using the internet and YouTube.

However, over 60 years, one could easily apply the concept of homework, tests, research, and science labs to the notion "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

STRONG commitment TO THE ARTS

While most schools have begun to severely cut music programs, the Kiski Area School District has continued to support and encourage all students to either play an instrument or sing loudly. With perhaps the finest music program in the state, both choral and instrumental ensembles have left audiences in awe of their talents.

Beginning in elementary school, each student has the opportunity to experience and embrace music. As many studies report that participating in music activities directly correlates to finer grades, the Kiski district offers a diverse assortment of music ensembles, classes, and groups. From marching band to show choir, the power of music has affected everyone. It connected people and afforded each a forum for expression.

High School and/or, prior to the mergers, the high schools in Vandergrift, Washington Township, Avonmore, or Bell Township. Upon receiving answers from 12 students, the following had family histories worth mentioning.
